

Morality handbook adopted for schools

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Guidelines on how to teach morality to California's 4.5 million public school children were adopted Friday by the State Board of Education.

The 41 pages of guidelines — adopted despite some objections that they should be more specific on acceptable moral standards — will be distributed to about 160,000 teachers from kindergarten through 12th grade. They will also go to institutions of higher education which train teachers.

Board member David Hubbard said the guidelines put California "miles ahead of other states in character development."

Covered in the guidelines are such topics as morality, truth, justice, patriotism, self-esteem, integrity and empathy with others.

The guidelines also deal with how to teach children about religion and the rights and responsibilities of citizenship.

They were prepared by an 11-member committee appointed 2½ years ago, which held 16 public meetings around the state.

Board member Gene Ragle of Roseville opposed their adoption, saying "I identify with the minority report." It was presented by committee members Mrs. Laurel Martin of Glendale and Mrs. Barbara Taylor of Santa Ana.

They contended the guidelines were "open ended," leaving moral standards pretty much up to each individual to decide.

After adopting the guidelines, the board instructed the State Curriculum Commission to incorporate them into its handling of material for new social science textbooks. Those books are scheduled for use in grades kindergarten through eight beginning in September 1976.

A member of the committee, former Republican Assemblyman Richard Barnes who was defeated last November in his bid for re-election called the guidelines a "strong step forward" in combatting "the deterioration of moral standards in this country."

Another committeeman, State Consumer Affairs Director John Kehoe, said the guidelines would be "a valuable tool" for teachers. He said they were the work of a committee with membership which reflected a diversity of philosophy and religious beliefs.

Board members also adopted the committee's recommendations on in-service training for teachers under the guidelines, and recommended the topic be required in training future teachers.

Official title of the guidelines is:

Sheriff's rescue boat cruises around the resort town of Guerneville, after the Russian River spilled over its banks causing 100 families to flee their homes. The Sacramento and Napa rivers also reached flood crests leaving dozens of roads under water in many Northern California communities. In Pleasant Hill, a flood-

Kissinger, Tho accord hinted

PARIS (UPI) — Presidential peace envoy Dr. Henry Kissinger and Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho met for six hours Friday in apparently intensified discussions aimed at bringing the Vietnam war to an end. There were some news reports the two may already have reached an agreement and were ready to sign.

ABC news, in a report from Paris, said there were "clear indications that the last of the major differences have been resolved and that both the U.S. and North Vietnamese are ready to sign an agreement."

There was no comment available from the U.S. and North Vietnamese delegations on reports an accord has already been reached.

who arrived first, were in good spirits and despite the bad weather, both Tho and his aide, Xuan Thuy, posed and smiled for photographers.

As the top-level meeting got underway, legal and language experts met separately at the American Saint-Nom-la-Breteche, site. This villa is owned by U.S. millionaire industrialist Milton Berzin.

As usual, there was no indication from either side which topics were under discussion or whether any progress was being made.

Thursday, for the first time since the 23rd round began Monday, the technical experts — who are responsible for protocols to accompany an eventual agreement — met with the senior negotiators.

Some French newspapers took this as a sign of progress.

At the regular four-way Kleber Avenue talks Thursday, the Viet Cong accused the Americans of dragging their feet in the secret talks while preparing for a big new offensive against the Communists in South Vietnam.

Spokesman Ly Van San said: "Saigon forces are grouping for big military clean-up operations. There are movements of troops and material. All this shows that the United States, while trying to make the negotiations drag on while delaying the signing of a peace agreement, is making ready to launch a new military adventure."

Phase 3 called Meany triumph

By PHILIP SHABECOFF WASHINGTON — President Nixon's decision to drop mandatory controls was described privately by labor officials Friday as a major victory for George Meany that would do much to promote labor peace in 1973.

These officials said that the decision to drop direct controls on wages, including the decision to name John Dunlop as director of the Cost of Living Council, was arranged, in part at least, in negotiations between Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, and George P. Shultz, the secretary of the Treasury.

Shultz reportedly agreed to press for the dropping of controls in return for a promise by Meany and other labor leaders to return to the stabilization program and to cooperate in seeking noninflationary wage increases in this year of heavy collective bargaining.

According to the labor officials, Meany told Shultz that the Phase 2 program was not controlling prices and was, therefore, inequitable, and mandatory wage controls should be dropped. Shultz, was said to be predisposed toward a voluntary stabilization program and sympathetic to Meany's arguments. One labor leader described Phase 3 as "a joint Shultz-Meany victory."

Labor sources said that the key to their satisfaction with the Phase 3 program was the appointment of Dunlop as director of the Cost of Living Council. They said that Dunlop had long experience in labor-management relations and that, unlike some of the Pay Board members, he was respected and trusted by trade union leadership.

More important, they said, Dunlop demonstrated while running the Construction Industry Collective Bargaining Commission that he does not limit himself to rigid guidelines or numerical standards. Instead, he worked to reduce inflationary wage trends in the construction industry by examining each contract on a case-by-case basis, meeting the particular needs of each situation.

This approach to controlling wages is close to the kind of program Meany and other leaders said would be acceptable even before Phase 1 began in August, 1971, the labor sources commented. Labor was never unduly concerned about the precise figure of a wage guideline. What Meany and the unions wanted was relative freedom in the collective bargaining process and flexibility to meet the peculiar needs of each contract situation, they said.

Labor also wanted to drop the bureaucratic procedures of the Pay Board, the officials said, because wage settlements were being held up for as long as six months while the board reached a decision.

Experts predict flurry of price hikes

By MICHAEL C. JENSEN New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A surge of price increases is likely in the weeks ahead following President Nixon's relaxation of economic controls, businessmen and economists predicted Friday.

Prices will be raised quickly by some companies because they no longer have to wait weeks or months for Price Commission approval, and by others because profit margin restrictions have been loosened.

some retail goods as prime areas for higher prices.

Meanwhile, a few companies began raising prices, mostly under the old rules, while others said they were planning similar action under Phase 3 rules. George R. Villa, chairman of Uniroyal Inc., a tire manufacturer, said his company probably will put into effect a number of price increases in various products "in the near future."

He added that the increases have been under consideration, and fall within the old Price Commission guidelines.

Among the price actions announced Friday were increases averaging 2.5 per cent on the wholesale prices of four types of Polaroid film. Others included a rise of 3.4 per cent in lead by the American Smelting & Refining Co., and of less than one-half of 1 per cent in beryllium-copper-base products by Brush Wellman Inc.

All three companies said the same action would have been taken under Phase 2, and Polaroid said its increases were announced to dealers on Jan. 8, three days before Phase 3 was announced.

Many economists said the flurry of price increases might be intense but short-lived, although they warned that there could be a serious impact on the Consumer Price Index.

"I find it quite disturbing," said Norman Robertson, vice president and chief economist for the Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh. "You could have a rash of these increases and it might have a sharp, if temporary, impact on consumer prices. If a company feels it's justified, why should it hold up? Do think the larger industries will hold back until the fog clears through?"

GE signs pact with Russia

Alfred E. Jones, president of the National Association of Purchasing Management, and a vice president of the Koppers Company Inc. in Pittsburgh, warned that there would be a "substantial number" of price increases now that Phase 2 has ended.

MOSCOW (UPI) — The General Electric Co. signed an agreement with the Soviet Union Friday which a company official said might lead to the production of the company's products in Russia.

Thomas O. Paine, a GE vice president and former director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said the agreement could lead to licensing arrangements with the Soviet Union that would be worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

He said the agreement also involves some exchange of technology in which no payment would be involved and some purchase of Soviet technology by GE.

The agreement puts major emphasis on exchange of technology in the power generation field, including steam and gas turbine and nuclear energy. It also calls for the exchange of specialist delegations and joint research and development projects.

Paine said GE hopes to participate in potentially huge projects for the development of Soviet gas and oil fields. He said GE would conduct a seminar for Soviet engineers in Philadelphia in May or June on high-voltage transmissions.

B52s hit tanks near Saigon

SAIGON, Saturday (AP) — South Vietnamese bombers destroyed four North Vietnamese tanks Friday along the Saigon River corridor within 40 miles of this capital city — the closest that enemy tanks have ever been reported — military headquarters announced today.

Vietnamese are attempting to move heavy artillery and possibly more tanks across the Cambodian border into South Vietnam, just north of the strike area.

U.S. B52s and tactical fighter bombers also continued to hammer away at enemy targets in the southern panhandle of North Vietnam.

B52s logged 36 strikes north of the demarcation line, while the smaller tactical fighter bombers flew an additional 115 in the 24 hour period, the Command said.

Targets, mainly supply centers, ranged from two miles south of the port city of Vinh to the demilitarized zone itself. Fifteen B52 strikes were directed at roads leading to the Mu Gia Pass, which is linked with the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

IN ANOTHER development, military sources reported strict security reports that the North

It marked the second time in the last two months that the eight-jet strategic bombers blasted the area, which, since last spring, has largely been controlled by the North Vietnamese.

Rare snowstorm pelts Deep South

Secretaries deserted their desks in the Florida Capitol Friday and rushed out to watch snowflakes fall. In the semitropical Rio Grande Valley of Texas, Corky Evans of Bayview watched Jello jell quickly in rare freezing weather. Temperatures plunged to 26 degrees in the Texas citrus belt and light snow glazed bridges and highways along the Gulf of Mexico from Texas to Florida. In the north, squalls off Lake Ontario dumped up to two feet of snow on parts of New York's Wayne County, closing many secondary roads and forcing at least three school districts to cancel classes. Over most of the nation, it was fair and cold. Below-zero temperatures were recorded as far south as Southern Oklahoma. It was 18 below at Alamosa, Colo. The National Weather Service said the Gulf Coast storm was a "once-in-a-decade occurrence." It said the 2 1/2 inches of snow at Galveston, Tex., was the second largest snowfall there in 100 years. New Orleans received its first snow in nine years.

More Watergate guilty pleas

WASHINGTON — The Watergate bugging trial was recessed Friday for the weekend amid strong indications that four other defendants were seeking to join former White House aide E. Howard Hunt Jr. in pleading guilty. U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica ordered all lawyers and defendants in the case to remain publicly silent. But when asked whether he would still be a defense attorney in the case next week, Henry Rothblatt replied "there is a possibility I may not." If Rothblatt is dropped, his clients would be free to offer a guilty plea on seven counts of conspiracy, burglary and wiretapping and bugging. All were arrested inside Democratic National Headquarters at the Watergate hotel last June 17.

Voluntary job-equality fails

NEW YORK — The so-called New York plan for voluntary hiring of minorities in the building industry was formally abandoned Friday, with a request that the federal government, state and city council tackle the problem through legislation. The plan agreed to two years ago called for the training and hiring of 800 minority workers over an 18-month period. It expired last July 1, and was not renewed. "Despite our most vigorous efforts," said a statement by Mayor John Lindsay, "we have been very disappointed with the results of the New York plan."

2 held in 2.2-million theft

CHICAGO — FBI agents arrested two Gary, Ind., men Friday in the theft of $2.2 million of negotiable securities from a Brinks Inc. shipment aboard a North Central Airlines plane last summer. The Chicago FBI office said Joseph Zale, 41, and Russell Korn, 35, had $351,000 worth of the stolen securities in their possession when they were arrested in Lansing, Ill.

Teacher strikes continue

Chicago's 650 public schools were closed by a teachers' strike for the third day Friday, and Philadelphia teachers manned picket lines as most continued to defy a court injunction to end the city's second teachers' strike in four months. Despite minor concessions from both sides, the Chicago Teachers Union continued to ask for pay increases and the school board continued to protest that the money isn't available. Despite continued picketing in Philadelphia, the school board reported on Friday that 215 schools out of a total of 285 opened their doors, compared with 184 on Thursday.

French security tight for Golda Meir's visit

PARIS — Protected by scores of policemen, Premier Golda Meir of Israel arrived in Paris Friday for an international socialist meeting that has irritated the French president. Mrs. Meir sped from her plane straight to the Israeli Embassy residence in downtown Paris. Police with weapons guarded the airport against possible attack by Palestinian guerrillas. It was Mrs. Meir's first trip outside Israel since the Munich killing by the Black September guerrilla group. President Georges Pompidou of France charged Tuesday that by being in Paris, she and European socialist leaders were interfering in the domestic affairs of France.

Soviet probe orbits moon

MOSCOW — The unmanned Luna 21 space probe ended a five-day flight from earth Friday and swung into moon orbit beginning its studies of the moon surface from a height of 58 miles, the Soviet news agency Tass said. Tass did not say whether the spacecraft would attempt a landing, but Western space experts said Luna 21, the first Soviet moon mission in 11 months, could contain a Lunokhod robot moonrover and equipment to drill for lunar soil samples.

Pompidou, Brezhnev accord

MINSK, USSR — France and the Soviet Union in a joint communique Friday expressed "deep anxiety" over progress of negotiations to end the Vietnam war and said they both will do what they can to help bring about an agreement. French President Georges Pompidou and Soviet Communist leader Leonid Brezhnev said possible cooperation between the Common Market and its Eastern counterpart, Comecon, was mentioned and would be explored later in low-level talks between the two nations.

Les Halles c'est fini

PARIS — Maurice Duclos heaved a side of beef onto his shoulder, took a last look back and moved out of Les Halles, ending 800 years of history and legend. The famed central market place of Paris, known to tourists and Parisians for its rough men, wicked women and onion soup, was transferred to an ultra-modern center on the outskirts of the city. Evacuation of the market place and destruction of its landmark iron pavilions began in 1969. "The new location is nice," Duclos said, "but Les Halles is Les Halles."

Nixon entertains Chinese, jets to Florida

Combined News Services

President Nixon flew to his Florida vacation home at Key Biscayne Friday night to work on his inaugural address, after entertaining at the White House the first group of Chinese performers to tour the United States in a quarter century.

Temperatures were in the low 50s and Nixon turned up his coat collar and shivered as he climbed off a helicopter at his bayfront Key Biscayne home. He was greeted by his neighbor and friend, C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo. Mrs. Nixon remained in Washington.

The President plans to use the weekend to finish the inaugural address he will deliver Jan. 20, and to prepare the State of the Union message he will send to Congress shortly after that.

Earlier, Nixon told the 90 members the Shenyang acrobatic troupe that as a result of his trip last year to China, the "great wall of hostility" between the two nations is coming down.

"It is a tragedy of this century that for 20 years a great wall of hostility separated the people of the People's Republic of China and the people of the United States of America."

Tossup

President Nixon Friday called it a tossup between the Washington Redskins and Miami Dolphins for the National Football League championship in Sunday's Superbowl.

"The two teams are so evenly matched it'll be a game of the breaks," Nixon told reporters in Washington.

Director

Dr. Clifton R. Wharton Jr., president of Michigan State University, Friday was elected a member of the Ford Motor Co. board of directors, becoming the third black to sit on an automotive company board.

Wharton, who has been president of MSU for three years, will not receive any fees for his service with Ford. Instead, the auto company will pay to MSU the fees normally paid to a member of the board.

Wharton, reached at his office in East Lansing, Mich., said he views himself as a "public" member of the board.

Pole sitter

"As stupid as it may sound," said Jim Dean, who has been sitting on top of a 53-foot pole for seven months, "the fact is that my efforts will be a world record and it will be held by the United States."

Dean, a former booking agent, is spending the worst winter weather in years in Dallas on top of the pole, trying to stay past Jan. 24. If he does, he will break the world record of eight months and four days.

"Everyone's gone crazy about Mark Spitz," said Dean, shivering in a freezing wind whistling through the canvas walls of his 5x9-foot platform. "But he hasn't done anything greater than I. I couldn't beat him swimming and he couldn't sit on a pole eight months."

Radio station KNUS pays Dean more than $100 a week, takes care of his poletop "household expenses," and will give him a $5,000 bonus if he breaks the record.

His lady

British actor Tom Courtenay married his leading lady, Cheryl Kennedy, Friday in London. The couple then went back to the theater to appear in the evening performance of the hit play which brought them together—"Time and Time Again."

The 31-year-old actor, whose films include "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner" and "Dr. Zhivago," previously was unmarried. His 24-year-old bride's previous marriage ended in divorce.

Robb's brother, Charles, married the former president's older daughter, Lynda Bird, in 1967.

Honorary Oscars will be presented to Rosalind Russell and Edward G. Robinson at the 45th annual Academy awards March 27.

The special awards were announced Friday in Hollywood by the Board of Governors of the Academy. Miss Russell will receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award. Robinson will be given a special Oscar for his contributions to the acting art.

On bail

Phil Regan, the actor and singer noted for his tenor rendition of Irish songs, was free on bail Friday after being charged with attempted bribery of Santa Barbara County officials.

Regan, 66, who has performed only at benefits in recent years, was arrested Thursday and charged with having attempted to bribe county officials to influence their vote in connection with approval of construction of Tyrolean Village, Inc., a high priced housing development planned on the Santa Barbara outskirts.

No contest

Orlando businessman Glenn W. Turner pleaded no contest Friday in Clearwater, Fla., to five misdemeanor charges involving his Dare To Be Great firm and was fined $2,500. The action headed off a second trial on more serious charges.

Turner had been charged with 65 counts of violating Florida's security law by selling unregistered securities and by failing to register as a dealer.

Turner said he thought the compromise was "the best way out."

Candidate

The wife of missing Congressman Hale Boggs of New Orleans announced Friday as a candidate for the 2nd District seat he held for 29 years.

Rep. Boggs, 58, was the House majority leader, the second ranking Democrat in that body, when he and three other men disappeared on a flight in Alaska.

During his long stint in Congress, Lindy Boggs was often her husband's most active political aide, in addition to gaining renown as one of Washington's hostesses.

How can a public park be fenced off and closed to the public? On New Year's Day I rode my bicycle over to El Dorado Park, and was surprised to find a large section near the Nature Center fenced off and locked up. Why wasn't this open for people to use on the holiday? G. J. G., Long Beach.

That section of the park, known as Section 2 and bordered by Spring Street, the 605 Freeway, Wardlow Road and the San Gabriel River, is closed only three days in the year: Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day, according to a recreation department spokesman, to allow employees to spend those holidays with their families. It is a fenced area open only under the supervision of a park ranger because of possible safety hazards and the risk of vandalism in the area, the spokesman said. The area includes several bodies of water, an archery range and a day camp. He said the department would be willing to consider keeping the section open on holidays if there is sufficient public demand.

I'm a retired Naval officer and former federal employee. In February, I decided to combine my Civil Service pay and my Navy benefits. Since then, however, I have received only half my retirement pay. By now, you have received a check for all of your back pay. Your civil service and Navy benefits have been combined, and from now on you'll receive one check each month to cover both. There evidently was some mix-up in getting a verification of your service record from the Navy Finance Center, according to a spokesman for the U.S. Civil Service Commission.

LIQUOR LIMIT

When the World Jamboree of Scouting was held in Idaho several years ago, we were hosts to a scoutmaster and three boys from Australia. We still correspond with them and the scout master has asked us about our national parks' policy concerning the sale of alcohol within the parks. He said when he was here he "didn't see any large scale selling of liquor" in our parks as there is in Australia. He said our parks "seem to be conducted in a more civilized manner than theirs and wants to know how the United States keeps from having so many places selling alcohol in these parks. Can you find an answer for him? Mrs. R. B., Long Beach.

Alcohol is sold on a very limited basis in the national parks by concessions, according to Ralph Harris, park ranger in Los Angeles. The concessionaire must have a permit from the national parks in addition to a state liquor license. The permits are usually only issued for bars with restaurants, Harris said. This partial prohibition doesn't include beer, which is more widely available.

Driver killed as car hits truck

A 43-year-old Beverly Hills man was killed Friday when his car slammed into the rear of a parked trailer-truck in a closed weigh-in area on the northbound San Diego Freeway in Carson, Highway Patrol officials said.

James Vincent Cline was pronounced dead at the scene after his car rammed the rear of the truck, which had been parked at the closed scale by Charles H. Jenkins, of 12791 Magnolia Ave., Garden Grove, who told officers he had stopped to call the Highway Patrol to report a wrong-way freeway driver.

Officials said Jenkins was not cited or held.

Army sergeant shoots, kills self after wild chase

A 24-year-old Army sergeant shot and killed himself after leading sheriff's deputies on a 95-mile-an-hour auto chase through Lancaster, officers said Friday.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office identified him as Kenneth Leach, who was assigned to an Army test unit at Edwards Air Force Base. Deputies said they were called Thursday night to the Lancaster home of a 17-year-old girl who said Leach had threatened to shoot her and himself. Leach drove off, they said.

The sheriff's office said Leach's mother, Mrs. Marie E. Hallenbeck lives in Folsom, and his estranged wife, Elizabeth, in Newberry Park.

Small boat upset at surf line

L.B. sailor dies in freak mishap near beach

A 34-year-old Long Beach-based sailor was killed Friday afternoon when the outboard boat in which he and five shipmates were riding was caught broadside by a wave and capsized in the surf line at Bolsa Chica State Beach.

Huntington Beach Police identified the victim as Michael Burnes, of Pittsburgh, Pa., stationed aboard the repair ship USS Hector.

Coroner's officials said Burnes was pronounced dead at 4:10 p.m. in Huntington Beach's Pacifica Hospital, despite efforts to save him by a friend, an lifeguard and physicians.

Lifeguards said Burnes and his shipmates were in a 15-foot outboard craft, cruising the coastline in the Huntington Beach area about 2:30 p.m. when the accident occurred.

Operating the boat was its owner, 30-year-old Jonny B. Williams, of 1900 W. 19th St., Long Beach. With Burnes and Williams in the boat were John Ench, James Johnston, Chester Haynes and Kevin Ostroff, police said. All are stationed aboard the Hector, now berthed at Pier 7 in the Long Beach Naval Station, they said.

As the seamen were passing a stretch of Bolsa Chica State Beach, 300 yards north of "the bluffs"—about three miles up the coast from Huntington Beach Pier—their small craft ventured too near the shore, lifeguards said.

Despite what guards termed a light haze that did not obscure the beach and a surf of two to three feet, the outboard craft was caught broadside by a wave that overturned it, and its occupants were "slammed ashore."

Police, who were continuing to investigate the accident late Friday night, said initial reports indicated that Burnes was a non-swimmer and floundered in the surf after the boat overturned.

Williams swam to his aid, said officers, and a surfer who witnessed the accident quickly paddled out to the scene with his board.

Williams and the surfer—identified as sailor Richard Ferranti, stationed aboard the USS Long Beach at the Naval Station—shoved Burnes onto the board, and as Ferranti towed the board to shore, Williams attempted to give his shipmate artificial respiration.

The accident had been quickly reported to police by shoreline derrick-workers at an oil facility, authorities said, and Marine Safety Officer Brian Gerold arrived just as the two sailors struggled ashore with the victim.

Gerold took over attempts to revive Bur-nes, trying artificial respiration and chest massage. Gerold continued to work over the victim in an ambulance en route to Pacifica Hospital.

Burnes was pronounced dead about a half-hour after his arrival at the hospital. Coroner's officials said an autopsy will be conducted today to determine the cause of death. Lifeguards reported that none of the other seamen aboard the small-craft were injured.

Flu blamed for two L.B. deaths

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Two Long Beach residents have died as a result of influenza, and flu has been listed as a contributory cause in a third death in Long Beach, the City Health Department announced Friday.

Dead as a direct result of influenza are two women, aged 74 and 68.

A 91-year-old woman with heart disease was the third victim, and doctors said that flu was a contributing factor.

A spokesman for the health department said its switchboard was swamped with phone calls. Most persons were asking about the symptoms of the London flu, a variant of the Hong Kong flu that caused an epidemic a few years ago.

According to the U. S. Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Ga., symptoms include fever from three to five days, headache, aches and pains in muscles and joints and occasionally a dry cough. About one-fourth of victims also complain of gastrointestinal upset, health authorities disclosed.

Schools continued to be plagued with absences, most because of respiratory ailments. In the Long Beach Unified School District, there were 57 new absences among elementary teachers and 42 among high school instructors.

In Los Angeles, a county health official said the flu situation was "rather quiet." Dr. Ichiro Kamei, chief of acute communicable disease control of the Los Angeles County Community Health Services Division, said there is no remarkable absenteeism in the county as yet.

"There is not an epidemic situation," he stated.

He said, however, that the London flu virus has been isolated in the county.

"We know it is here," he said.

Phony money found at college

Associated Press

Secret Service agents Friday investigated a counterfeiting scheme on the campus of Los Angeles City College. The operation was uncovered early this week when a faculty member found sheets of phony currency, an engraving plate, ink and paper in the graphic arts department print shop.

A number of students were questioned but no arrests had been made, agents said.

"We seized two sheets of the most poorly reproduced bills I have ever seen," said Robert Powis, agent in charge of the Secret Service's Los Angeles office.

"It is within the realm of possibility that it was a prank."

Powis said it had not been determined whether the sheets of bills had been printed by students or outsiders or whether any of the bills had been circulated.

He said the investigation would continue.

More public awareness of police activities needed, says Younger

State Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger Friday cited the need for more public awareness of what the police are doing and why. Younger told members of the Los Angeles area Council on Police-Community Relations that although there are dozens of programs around the state where police officers reach youth in the classrooms, a similar effort is needed to reach the adult population.

The attorney general said the "there will always be tensions between police and some persons in the communities they serve. Society asks the police officer to perform an impossible task, and then too often society is unwilling to understand the ramifications of the task."

Younger called for more community involvement in the regular activities assigned to police such as "good neighbor" and "block parent" functions.

Greater public awareness of police activities would increase "positive contacts with police officers as well as an improved capability for the police to control criminal activity in the neighborhood," Younger said.

Younger stated that progress has been made in the past few years to further public education, especially the "neighborhood car plans," but he said that training police officers "in good community relations and providing them with specialists in the subject is obviously not enough."

The attorney general said that his commission on community-police relations will issue its report in March.

Navy team concludes L.B. shipyard probe

A three-man team concluded its investigation of Long Beach Naval Shipyard Friday and flew back to Washington to report to Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird.

Laird ordered the probe of Long Beach and the state's two other yards at Vallejo and San Francisco following Rep. Charles Leggett, R-Vallejo, blasting him Monday as a "minus" as defense secretary.

Leggett also charged "scandalous operation" in the shipyards and Laird responded with the immediate probe.

During the day's look in Long Beach, the team checked management procedures in regards to material, personnel and records; ships currently being repaired; and planning methods.

Rear Adm. R.W. Burk, deputy for field activities for the Ship Systems Command, headed the team. Others were Capt. Robert Norrin, inspector general for the Material Command; and Cmdr. W.A. Rahder, plans director for SSC.

DINUBA — A flight mechanic, testing a repaired aircraft, swooped down over his own house and found a burglar at work.

Kanawyer, 30, service manager of Denair Aviation in Fresno, said Friday he often flies over his home while testing aircraft.

"When I flew over the house Thursday the particular type of car was in the driveway" that had been used in the previous burglary, Kanawyer said.

Reagan outlines plans to streamline state government

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Reagan administration Friday outlined long-range plans to "streamline" state government, ranging from closing virtually every mental hospital and youth correction center to probing the causes of criminal violence.

In his "State of the State" message to the Legislature Thursday, Gov. Reagan proposed broad-stroke plans for a reorganization of the state Health and Welfare Agency whose jurisdiction spans everything from prisons to employment and public aid.

DR. EARL BRIAN
Health, Welfare Secretary

AT A NEWS conference Friday, Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian sketched in some of the details and announced the administration will seek approval of the Legislature for most of the major revisions. Potentially the most controversial proposals call for a 10-year program to gradually shut down all but a couple of the state's remaining 11 hospitals for the mentally ill and mentally retarded and a somewhat shorter plan for virtually all the 10 California Youth Authority facilities.

Those plans are expected to face stiff opposition in the Legislature, both from lawmakers whose districts include state hospitals and from potential Democratic candidates for governor — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti and Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco.

Other Reagan reorganization plans for consolidating employment and rehabilitation programs under a new department of manpower and creating a new Department of Benefit Payments to issue welfare, health, unemployment and disability payment checks.

Under a reorganization already under way, activities of the Departments of Mental Hygiene, Public Health and Health Care Services, along with social service functions of the Social Welfare Department, already are being consolidated in a new Department of Health.

Brian said the Legislature will be asked to provide about $500,000 to help finance Reagan's proposed new Center for the Study of Violent Behavior at UCLA which would probe the causes of violence with an aim toward "predicting, controlling and avoiding" it.

HE SAID the federal government would be asked to contribute another $500,000 for the project. He expressed hope that within 18 months the research center could provide some "concrete" conclusions to be shared with law enforcement, prison and mental health authorities.

Coast commissions hold first meeting

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau
SACRAMENTO — Eighty-four Californians selected to prepare a plan protecting the coastline assembled in the state Capitol Friday, and after being given introductory words of inspiration spent the day finding out how to get the papers, pencils, and paperclips they'll need to do the job.

The members of the statewide Coastline Zone Conservation Commission and the six regional commissions created by the passage of Proposition 20 last Nov. 7 participated in a workshop sponsored by Gov. Reagan, the Senate Rules Committee, and Assembly Speaker Robert Moretti, each of whom made two appointments to each board.

The six members of the state commission — Bernard J. Ridder Jr. of Long Beach; Melvin B. Lane of Atherton; Roger T. Osenbaugh of Alhambra; Ellen Stern Harris of Beverly Hills; Richard A. Wilson of Covelo; and Fred Farr of Carmel — agreed to hold their first formal meeting at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 24 at the San Francisco Airport.

By that time, their number will have increased to 12, with each of the six regional commissions delegating one of their members to serve on the state board.

The South Coast Regional Commission scheduled its first meeting for Monday, Jan. 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the Long Beach Harbor Building.

All commission meetings are open to the public.

THE commissioners, meeting in an Assembly committee hearing room, were greeted by State Resources Secretary Norman L. Livermore, speaking for Reagan; by Sen. Robert Lagomarsino, appearing for Senate president pro-tem James R. Mills; by Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, in behalf of Moretti, and by Chief Dep. Atty. Gen. Sanford N. Gruskin, representing Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger.

Livermore said that voters had decided on Nov. 7 that the "California coast is an eco-system which needed protection," and advised the commissioners that "you will be under great pressure both to preserve and develop the coastline. It is possible that the best interests of California can be served by permitting both."

Lagomarsino and Sieroty urged that the "Proposition 20 campaign rhetoric be forgotten."

"Proposition 20 is no longer merely an idea, but is now people, and 'Save the Coastline' is no longer merely a slogan, but a program," Sieroty said.

Gruskin, whose office will serve as legal adviser to the commissions, said there were a number of precedents for the project, and cited the San Francisco Bay Area Conservation and Development Commission and the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency.

Richard Carpenter, general counsel to the League of California Cities, then acted as moderator for a series of panels devoted to setting up the machinery to be used by the commissions.

Guidelines to use in seeking executive directors for each commission, plus a multitude of personnel, fiscal, and legal topics were discussed, with representatives from the attorney general's office, State Personnel Board, State Dept. of General Services, State Finance Department, and other state agencies participating.

Brian told newsmen the "fundamental rationale" of the administration in proposing to close the hospitals and CYA facilities was the belief that "people receive better care when they're close to their home environment."

In both cases, he said, the state would transfer the millions of dollars it now spends on corrections and mental hygiene, to local communities so patients and offenders could be handled at home.

BRIAN, a 30-year-old physician, said it has not yet been determined which facilities would be closed or when he said the administration will push a 10-year plan for hospital closures so local communities and employees can prepare for them in advance.

He stressed the legislation will ask for additional state authority to set standards for community facilities so patients will be assured of the same "quality and quantity" of care they now receive in state hospitals.

Critics, including Democratic Secretary of State Edmund Brown have questioned whether patients are receiving top flight treatment on the outside under current hospital closure programs.

BRIAN conceded, "there are some places that have not been brought up to an adequate level." He said there had been a "lot of complaints" and added local facilities are "doing a relatively good job but I think there is room for improvement."

Brian said earlier that two or three of the 10 CYA institutions may be retained and operated by the state for "hard-core" juvenile criminals but "noncriminal" offenders should be dealt with locally.

State scraps utility policy of 'gentlemen's agreements'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state has scrapped a policy under which state officials reached 11 controversial "gentlemen's agreements" with utility companies on power plant sites, state resources chief Norman Livermore said Friday.

Rescinding the siting guidelines was "an acknowledgment of the fact" that there has been an "evolution" toward more conservationist thinking in the state, Livermore said in an interview.

Livermore said conservationists have filed lawsuits against the "gentlemen's agreements," arrived at in the administrations of former Gov. Edmund Brown and Gov. Ronald Reagan, Livermore said.

TWO OF the plants — at San Onofre and in the Diablo Valley — have been built. The others still are in the planning stage.

The guidelines never were binding, said Ford B. Ford, Livermore's chief assistant. He said they first were adopted in 1965 because there then was no other way the state's various environment agencies could have any say on the environment impact of power plants.

The guidelines were revised in 1969.

The 1970 Legislation which eventually led to the "Friends of Mammoth" State Supreme Court ruling and to the passage last November of the Coastline initiative give the state a "new body of law which didn't exist in 1965" to regulate siting of new power plants, Ford said.

State gas, oil output continues steady drop

SACRAMENTO (AP) — As it has since 1968, oil and gas production in California declined again last year, the State Division of Oil and Gas said Friday.

The dropoff "further points up the existence of an energy crunch in California," said state oil and gas supervisor John F. Matthews Jr.

The department said there was an 11.2 decline in gas production and a .5 percent drop in oil production last year.

Matthews said oil production has declined 13 per cent and gas by 27 per cent since 1968, when a moratorium on offshore oil drilling was imposed by the State Lands Commission in the wake of the Santa Barbara Channel oil blowout.

"Soaring consumer demands for energy coupled with the downward trend in state oil and gas production is an unhealthy and alarming trend for the state's economy," Matthews said.

2nd day ends with no Corona verdict

FAIRFIELD — The Juan Corona jury failed to reach a verdict in the second day of deliberations Friday as Corona sat alone in a nearby cell and told a friend:

"All I can do now is pray."

The 38-year-old Mexican farm labor contractor faces 25 separate murder charges in the hacking and stabbing deaths of drifters and field workers whose bodies were unearthed in peach orchards north of Yuba City in the spring of 1971.

Corona's 14-week trial went to a 10-man, two-woman jury Thursday. Deliberations were scheduled to resume Saturday morning.

"I feel very empty because I cannot do any more for Juan," said defense attorney Richard Hawk, who paced back and forth in the courthouse cafeteria, chain-smoking.

"I FEEL as if Juan is on the edge of a building. I'm just not sure if he's going to be caught or not. It's tough to wait after you've worked so long on such a case," said Hawk.

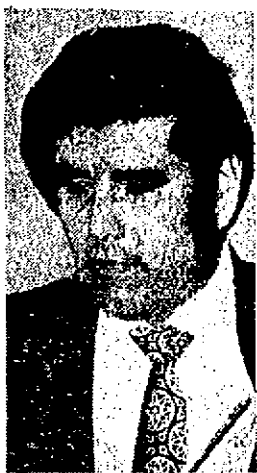

After about the first hour of deliberation Thursday, jury foreman Ernest Phillips, 53, told the judge the panel wanted clarification whether guilt or innocence should be considered separately or collectively in the 25 deaths. Patton repeated his earlier instructions that each charge must be considered separately, and said they must return 25 separate verdicts.

Hawk, who did not call a single witness or put Corona on the stand, explained to a reporter Friday he worried that Corona might have suffered a heart attack if he had to face many days of cross-examination.

THIEF PUTS FOOT IN...

BELLEVILLE, Ill. — Aman confronted by a policeman as he ransacked an apartment made a mistake when he said "I live here."

"No you don't," said Patrolman Terry L. Schmidt, "I do!" Schmidt had just returned from work when the incident occurred.

JUAN CORONA
Awaits Jury's Verdict

said brother Felix Corona, who owns a movie theater in Phoenix, Ariz. He said it was most difficult for Corona's mother, who came here from Autlan, Mexico, to attend court sessions daily, although she understands no English.

Meanwhile, the prosecution awaited the jury's decision at a cluttered Fairfield apartment.

"I'm trying to clean this place up," said Sutter County Dist. Atty. G. Dave Teja. "I can't say that I'm nervous, but waiting for anything as significant as a verdict in this case is extremely difficult."

JUDGE Richard E. Patton instructed jurors if necessary to deliberate daily through the weekend from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., with a Sunday morning break for religious services.

Lawyers for both sides agreed it was not unusual due to the length of the trial for jurors to take more than a day or two to pore over testimony and evidence. But Hawk said he would begin to fear a hung jury if there was no verdict by Saturday night.

The jury includes one minority member, a black man. The jurors' average age is about 50. Seven are retired employees of nearby military bases.

4 bodies found above cafe in Hamilton City

HAMILTON CITY (UPI) — Glenn County sheriff's deputies Friday discovered four bodies in a room above a cafe in this small, rural community.

Deputy Sheriff Walter Soeth said initial reports listed the cause of death as "accidental asphyxiation or suicide."

He said the victims were apparently of Mexican descent and had not been identified. The victims' sex was not known, nor was the time of their death.

The bodies were discovered about 3:40 p.m. above Jessie's Cafe, Soeth said.

Hamilton City is about 10 miles south of Chico in the Sacramento Valley.

Ellsberg, Russo 'ecstatic about jury'

Associated Press

A jury which includes a partially disabled Vietnam war veteran was selected Friday in the Pentagon Papers trial, a case in which the war is a paramount issue.

The 10 women and two men chosen will judge whether Daniel Ellsberg, 41, and Anthony Russo, 35, are guilty of espionage, conspiracy and theft for releasing to news media a top-secret study of U.S. involvement in the war.

THE defendants have admitted their roles in releasing the papers, but say they broke no law. Both outspoken opponents of the Vietnam war, they say they sought to help end the conflict by informing the American public of information it had a right to know.

Ellsberg and Russo appeared ecstatic as they left court at noon.

"I'm in love with this jury," exclaimed Russo. "I think it's a great jury." Ellsberg said, "We're ready to go into trial now. Our fate is in their hands."

and I think to a large extent the liberties of all of us are in their hands. I think they're in very good hands."

He added that he was pleased at the preponderance of women on the jury, saying, "Women as a whole have clearer eyes about this war... they are more skeptical about this war."

THE JURY was seated after eight days of questioning by U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne. Defense and prosecution attorneys used up their peremptory challenges Friday, alternating in removing panelists they apparently felt were unsympathetic to their side. The defense challenged those who expressed hawkish views on the war; the government removed persons with antiwar attitudes.

However, the surprise of the day came when the government prosecutor, Asst. U.S. Atty. David Nissen, exhausted the last of his challenges, leaving on the panel the Vietnam war veteran who had told the judge during questioning: "I pray for peace."

The ex-Marine, Wilfred Balthodano, 24, told of being nearly blown apart when a tank on which he was riding on ran into a U.S. bomb.

THIRTEEN men in his unit were killed and he said he was unconscious for four days. He lost his spleen, suffered massive internal damage is currently on a 40 per cent disability pension.

During questioning, he said he had changed in his way of thinking. At first, he said, "I was a soldier obedient to that I was told." Now, he said, "I don't believe we should be there... I believe this should have been over a long time ago... At the moment, I pray for peace."

All jurors, regardless of their war views, swore they could be impartial and fair in the case.

SELECTION of the alternates began immediately after the jury was seated.

The jurors, in addition to Balthodano, are Cora Neal, Jean Boutelier, Donna Kelpe, Joan Duhigg, Daley Embree, Anna Saunders, Margaret Caschube, Lupe Vasquez, Phyllis Ortmann, Moreles Pittman, and Darlene Arneaud. Their occupations range from seamstress to auto assemblyman; housewife to jazz pianist to postal clerk.

The case has been pending for more than one year, with legal maneuverings causing repeated delays.

Last summer, after the first jury had been sworn, the government revealed to the judge it had a secret wiretap on which a member of the defense team had been overheard. The defendants demanded to know the contents of the wiretap, and the government refused.

The trial stalled while the defense appealed up to the U.S. Supreme Court, which refused last November to hear the case.

The jury, which had remained in waiting for four months, was dismissed on the advice of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals after the defense contended that those jurors had been swayed by publicity surrounding the presidential election.

Fuel crisis held threat to trains

United Press International

A spokesman for the Association of American Railroads said Friday train service could be curtailed soon if there is not a break in the nationwide fuel shortage.

The railroad spokesman said in Washington there was no "serious" disruption in train service yet, but if the shortage continues there could be reduced train speeds, curtailed services on some branch lines and maybe something "even more serious."

He said most oil suppliers had cut back the amount given to railroads to the level of a year ago even though railroad fuel needs are running about 10 per cent above a year ago. The increase is due in a big degree to the movement of the Russian grain shipment, he said.

THE SPOKESMAN said the railroads were the "greatest" from Michigan and Indiana to Salt Lake City and the hardest hit terminals were Elkhart, Ind.; Little Rock, Ark.; Salt Lake City, Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Airlines earlier had said they were noticing the shortage, especially in New York.

Elsewhere, the effects of the shortage varied Friday from mild to crisis-proportion.

Zelma, Ky., in the Western Kentucky mountains, has been without fuel since Wednesday morning when a rockslide damaged a natural gas line, cutting off fuel to some 150 families in sub-freezing temperatures.

THE STATE hospital at Fulton, Mo., had its natural gas supply cut off Wednesday and went to a reserve supply that would have run out Friday. Sun Oil Co., of Tulsa, Okla., released 24,000 gallons of fuel Friday that allowed the hospital to continue to operate.

The Transport Co. of Milwaukee, Wis., applied to the Department of Transportation for assistance in obtaining diesel oil in order to keep the city's buses in operation.

The shortage was causing concern in some state capitals. Colorado legislators, who passed on Thursday a resolution asking for a national emergency policy to avoid future shortages, were talking of establishing a similar state policy.

The Indiana House was voted a statement by Gov. Otis Bowen Friday in which he said his administration "does not want to be alarmed" but "the fuel situation is tight."

HE URGED Hoosiers to "conserve fuel by turning down thermostats several degrees," by checking "a few simple things as home insulation, storm windows and whether or not fireplace dampers are closed when not in use..." these simple procedures, if applied on a broad scale, can result in substantial conservation of energy.

Gov. Patrick J. Leacy of Wisconsin also ordered state agencies to turn down thermostats to conserve fuel.

Butz blames ecologists

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz Friday charged part of the blame for the nation's current fuel shortage rests with the critics of the Alaskan pipeline project.

We should have been thinking about the energy shortage when we blocked construction on the Alaskan pipeline five years ago, Butz said. "When we run short of power, the first people to have their power shut off should be those who blocked the Alaskan pipeline."

Jacking security's humdrum

Associated Press
Stepped up security procedures at the nation's airports have failed to deter large scale seizures of weapons or hijacking and have resulted in a few complaints from passengers, authorities say.

Associated Press
Cases of about a dozen major cities showed that seizures of airline passengers had turned up scattered guns, knives and other weapons in the past week after new federal regulations to prevent hijackings went into effect.

"Things are really going much better than our expectations," said a Dallas Airlines spokesman in Dallas. "Our security people are improving their efficiency every day and passengers are cooperating in almost every instance."

A spokesman at Honolulu International Airport agreed that passengers have been "99 per cent cooperative" since the heightened security procedures took effect on Friday, Jan. 5.

James K. Carr, a director of San Francisco International Airport, said "nothing of any significance" had been turned up in the first week of searches. He said there have been no arrests resulting from the screening.

Jack Harper, assistant manager at the San Jose Municipal Airport, said "nothing of any significance" had been turned up in the first week of searches. He said there have been no arrests resulting from the screening.

A security spokesman in Atlanta said nothing unusual had been uncovered. "But we feel that people now, because of the publicity given this thing, are putting unusual articles in bags which are checked," he added.

A United Airlines spokesman in Los Angeles reported turning up one switchblade and one hatchet. Both were confiscated and returned to passengers at the conclusion of the flight. American Airlines said it had to confiscate several Indian arrowheads and spearheads being carried to a museum in Arizona. They were returned to the owner in Phoenix.

Donald S. Donohue, the air security coordinator for the customs operation at Kennedy Airport in New York, said fewer guns and other weapons had been turned up in the week starting Jan. 5, 1973, than in a comparable period last year.

He noted that the searches now are conducted by private guards hired by the airlines, while last year's screening was done by customs inspectors.

"I can only interpret the figures to mean that the private security forces are simply not as adept at searching baggage as the customs security officers," he said.

All TWA jumbo jets grounded

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines said Friday it was grounding for inspection all its jumbo jets of the type that crashed in Florida's Everglades last Dec. 29, killing 100 passengers and crew members.

A spokesman for the airlines declined to say whether the grounding of the Lockheed L-1011 TriStars was related to the crash of the Eastern Air Lines plane.

The big jets represent about 2 per cent of TWA's domestic fleet and should be returned to service next week, the spokesman added.

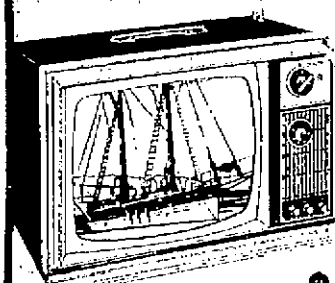

He said they would undergo "complete engine inspection" at the earlier Kansas City facilities.

Babies in good condition

Baer quint's' mom 'overwhelmed, great'

By F. RICHARD
CICCONI

CHICAGO (AP) — Mrs. Lynn Baer gave birth to quintuplets a week ago. She said Friday she still is shocked, overwhelmed and has only "a foggy memory of the babies as pink blur."

Mrs. Baer, 26, talked with newsmen at Highland Park Hospital for the first time since the babies — three girls and two boys — were born Jan. 5.

"I feel great. I'm anxious to get out of here and go home, to be able to feel the babies, to touch them and get the mother instincts," she said.

The babies were rushed shortly after their birth to Evanston Hospital's special neonatal ward. They were reported in good condition.

"I was awake for the whole thing," Mrs. Baer recalled of her delivery. "I saw the babies being born and that's an experience I'll never forget," she laughed.

"They (nurses) kept saying, 'Here comes another one, here comes another one,'" she added.

band, James, a stockbroker, reside in Northbrook, a Chicago suburb near both Highland Park and Evanston.

She took fertility drugs to induce pregnancy and she said,

"We knew the risks and the possibilities of multiple births but if I had to do it again, I would do the same thing."

Shortly after her pregnancy was confirmed, doctors told Mrs. Baer she would have twins.

"I thought there might have been a third baby because of the size of me," she said. "I was really big."

"I never, ever dreamed there would be five," she said.

Mrs. Baer wore a yellow nightgown, red robe and blue slippers. She was interviewed in a spare room and was able to walk from a wheelchair into the room.

"The magnitude of the whole thing has not really hit me," she said. She and her husband do not want to involve the quintuplets in any commercial enterprises.

"We want the children to be brought up as normal as possible. I know we will have some rough roads to cross... A lot of it will be trial and error," she added.

Mrs. Baer saw her children only briefly after the birth. "I was really foggy... the babies were a pink blur."

She said she plans to visit them as soon as she is released from the hospital "but I don't know when that will be."

"I'm still in shock," she added. "I'm terribly excited. The whole experience has been overwhelming."

She was asked if she planned on more children. "Oh, God, not for awhile," she laughed. "Right now I have a big enough family. My concern are the babies, my husband and our dog."

She said their three bedroom house in Northbrook "will be big enough for awhile."

Her husband stepped beside her and she grinned at him. "He looks worse than I do."

Yale looks for girls

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale University is looking for more female students.

The Yale Corporation, has announced plans to establish a 3-2 male-female ratio at Yale.

At present, 21 per cent of the 4,831 Yale undergraduates are women. A four-year coeducation experiment leading to the current female enrollment began in September 1969 when 18 per cent of the freshmen were women.

Side effects seen in vasectomy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Results of new experiments with immature male rats suggests greater caution in the use of the male vasectomy operation as a routine birth control procedure, a team of New York medical researchers reported Friday.

They said an estimated one-million American men underwent such operations in 1972 alone. The rat tests suggest extensive additional studies need to be done in man to determine whether such operations might adversely affect the reproductive system permanently and also have harmful effects elsewhere in the body, they said.

HOWEVER, in recent months, at least two prominent specialists in vasectomies have challenged a previously reported concept of a Syracuse, New York pathologist, Dr. John Bernard Henry, that vasectomies might cause permanent sterility and other health problems, such as arthritis and multiple sclerosis.

In the new report on the rat studies, a team of New York Medical College and Long Island University researchers said the experiments involved use of the vasectomy technique, or a closely related one called "vasoligation," to close off the two tiny ducts that carry the male spermatozoa — the same methods used in humans.

IN SUCH operations, since the spermatozoa can no longer escape, the result is male sterility. But if a man changes his mind later on, a re-opening operation is available. However these operations are successful in restoring fertility in only one out of four cases.

The New York researchers reported that, after 20 weeks, the operations on the rats produced damaging effects on the size "and perhaps function and hormonal activity" of the animals' testicles and closely related structures.

They also said small growths, called "cysts," were observed in the reproductive organs and occasionally in the abdominal cavity and elsewhere — suggesting to them that adverse effects might be caused elsewhere in the system.

In a report in the technical journal Science, the investigators said:

"OUR STUDY... suggests that pending extensive study of the endocrine, hormonal and somatic effects of vasectomy in man greater caution be observed in the use of vasectomies as a routine contraceptive procedure."

Authors of the report were Dr. Arthur M. Sackler, a psychiatrist, of New York Medical College, and three researchers of Long Island University's laboratories for therapeutic research.

The New York researchers said it remained to be seen whether the same effects would be produced in sexually mature rats as distinguished from the immature ones they used.

Dr. Fletcher Derrick, chief urologist of George Washington University Hospital and a specialist in vasectomies, was asked to comment on the report. He said that, for one thing, the "microsurgery" required for operating on immature rats might of itself accidentally lead to adverse results — and that use of larger animals would have been preferable.

But he added that in his experience with hundreds of human vasectomies and in a continuing 18-month-old study of 25 vasectomized mature male dogs, he and his colleagues had so far found no evidence of the type described by the New York group.

Derrick is one of the scientists who questioned the earlier theory by Dr. Henry of Syracuse.

Flu deaths in U.S. 'above epidemic threshold'

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Center for Disease Control Friday said deaths from influenza and pneumonia across the country have moved above the epidemic

Girl home with plastic intestines

ROCKAWAY TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A slender, 11-year-old girl whose survival is medical history was given a heart-pounding welcome home Friday.

Hundreds of school children cheered and adults wiped their eyes as Jan Ann Westerink stepped off a plane from Richmond, Va., where her intestines had been removed and replaced with a plastic substitute.

Doctors at the Medical College of Virginia, where the surgery was performed on the blonde, hazel-eyed youngster, say she is only the second person known to have survived such surgery for any length of time.

"I'M KIND of scared," Jan Ann admitted as she disembarked from the Civil Air Patrol plane to face the entire school population of Rockaway Township, 1,500 students and two blaring bands. But she quickly dispelled any idea she was any more than scared.

"I'm okay," she said. "I feel very good." She said she was surprised at the large crowd. Aboard the plane she'd seen the 30 school buses lined up that had brought the bands and youngsters, but she didn't recognize them from the air.

"I thought they were yellow barrels," she explained.

The bands played "When the Saints Go Marching In" as Jan Ann was driven away from the plane, the youngsters chanted and many townspeople pressed money into the hands of those taking up collections for the $40 a day it takes to keep Jan Ann alive on a special food fed her intravenously.

THE SCENE was much more lively but less tense than the day more than two months ago when the girl was rushed to the airport to be flown to Virginia.

Jack Brandt, a Civil Air Patrol first lieutenant who flew the converted cargo plane that took Jan Ann to Virginia and brought her back, noticed a difference in the youngster, too.

"On that first flight down we were wondering if she was going to make it," Brandt said. "You wouldn't know it was the same girl."

Jan Ann suffered chest pains Nov. 9 while she was doing her homework. Doctors at nearby St. Clare's Hospital in Denver discovered gangrene poison was eating away her intestines.

A computer selected from thousands of names in its memory bank that of Dr. David Hume was the only man who could help her.

IN VIRGINIA, her small intestine and all but four inches of her large intestine were removed and replaced with plastic tubing. Now, for 16 hours a day she must wear a 2½ pound battery-operated motor which feeds her body from a plastic bag with the special liquid that keeps her alive.

Doctors say much of the surgery was experimental, and Hume says the eventual hope for Jan Ann is an intestinal transplant.

The girl's father, Jan Westerink, a self-employed carpenter, said more than $7,000 has been collected to help pay the girl's medical expenses. The flights to and from Virginia also were donated.

threshold for the first time this winter. It said 639 deaths from influenza and pneumonia were reported from 122 major cities last week, 84 more than the number normally expected for this time of year.

A spokesman for the NCDC said however, there may have been deaths during the Christmas and New Year's holiday period that went unreported until last week, causing the total for the week to appear unusually high.

Outbreaks of influenza, mostly believed to be the London flu or related strains, were recorded in many of the nation's big cities, including New York, Boston, Chicago, Memphis, Baltimore, Washington, D.C., and the San Francisco Bay Area.

In addition, cases of London flu have been reported by state health officials in Atlanta and Los Angeles and San Diego.

There is no vaccine that gives specific protection against the London flu, although health authorities believe the vaccine used to combat the old Hong Kong virus may offer some degree of immunity.

The epidemic threshold is the term used by influenza experts at the NCDC to illustrate the number of deaths that occur above the number expected for this time of year from the flu, and one of its most serious complications, pneumonia. If the number of deaths exceeds the epidemic threshold, it appears as a "blip" on the graphs of the epidemiologists who keep track of the disease at the NCDC.

Officials said however, that although the number of flu deaths exceeded the epidemic threshold last week, federal influenza experts prefer to wait for two successive weeks of excess deaths before attaching any significance to the mortality rate.

Influenza occurrences have now been identified in 18 states with Iowa the latest addition to the list. The others are North Carolina, Georgia, Washington, Hawaii, California, Arizona, Colorado, Kansas, Texas, New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Tennessee, Illinois, Maryland and New Jersey.

Dr. Robert Rubin, epidemiologist at the NCDC, said that despite the outbreaks of London flu in the U.S. this winter, influenza is not as prevalent as it was at this time last year. He said it still was too early to tell whether influenza would pose a major health problem for Americans this winter.

Aside from the outbreaks in the major cities, only sporadic cases are being reported in the remainder of the country, the NCDC said. California appeared to be the state hit the hardest by influenza, most of it apparently the London variety. Health officials there said the number of deaths had approached the epidemic level in Northern California's 11 largest cities, where 30 per cent of the state's 20 million residents live. Some 57 deaths from influenza were reported there during the first week of 1973.

AJUGA REPTAN... Creepy 'Carpet Bugle'

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Some gardeners won't agree with us that the creepy "Carpet Bugle" (ajuga reptans) is a good ground cover if grown in shade because plants die out in patches.

We maintain there are two reasons why this ground cover isn't happy in shade. Before we explain the reasons, let's first understand how this particular type of ajuga grows. The plant is an individual rosette of leaves with a stubby base and roots. It sends out runners that lie on the soil. The runners' knobs root about every three inches and develop rosettes. The plants are spaced at about six to 10 inches apart. The runners, growing in various directions with rosettes of leaves popping out at intervals, soon grow together forming a matted ground cover about three inches high. The four-to-six-inch spikes are covered with showy blue flowers in the spring.

PERSONALLY, we feel that if we wanted to plant ajuga in the shade around camellias and other plants in order to cover the bare soil, we'd rather plant ajuga than we would helixine moss the "baby's tears," because ajuga is more easily kept within bounds, whereas, baby's tears is not.

Now here are the two reasons why ajuga is unhappy in shade. First, the plants are kept too moist. Soil surface must get dry before plants are watered. The constant dampness also invites snails and slugs, too. The second reason why ajuga tends to die out in spots is that the plant may be either planted too deep, or the crowns are uncovered but below the soil surface, causing the soil to gradually wash into the hollow areas. Which ever the problem, the soil smothered crown eventually slowly dies out.

Ajuga reptans grows better in the sun because it gets more opportunity to become thirsty before the ground cover is watered. Yes, sometimes it even might briefly suffer for water. We wouldn't recommend planting this ground cover in the sun in desert areas, not that they would suffer from the cold. They're listed as tolerating temperature from minus 10 to minus 20 degrees. But there they'd have to grow in shade.

WE SHOULD know there are other types of ajugas, too. The A. reptans atropurpurea foliage is bronze in color. The flowers are like the first named and described. For bright contrasting foliage check on A. reptans variegata—"burgundy glow." Leafage is silvery-white marked with bronze and bright burgundy shade. A. crispa—"giant ajuga" is a larger, more vigorous grower, and edges more crispy. It grows about six to nine inches tall hence should be planted 12 to 18 inches apart. They can tolerate cold from down to 5 above zero. There are also the Green Giant foliage which is bright green and the bronze giant leafage which is a deep metallic bronze. A. crispa hybrida—"jungle ajuga" is larger and more rounded, grows more clumpy with eight-to-10-inch spikes of blue flowers. Jungle green and jungle bronze round out the ajuga family. Gardeners have quite a wide choice of kinds to select for specific garden areas. Ground covers are planted just about any time of the year.

Right now though, is a good opportunity to obtain bulbs that bloom in other seasons of the year, other than after the usual spring blooming bulbs are through flowering.

For instance, there's hybrid Amaryllis, Callas, Gladiolus, Tuberous Begonias, Lachenalis, and Allium gigantea. Gladiolus and Tuberous Begonias furnish the widest range of colorful flowers.

Gardener can plant two or three crops of glads at about six week intervals and successfully harvest crops of flowers. The amount of crops depends upon the number of bulbs, or corms, that are planted.

Q. — We received a lovely potted poinsettia plant this Christmas. It appears that there are four plants in the pot with one flower on each. It started to drop its leaves so I put it outside. My question is, "can I plant this in the garden and if so, what steps do I take?" Mrs. Frank Hess, Long Beach.

A. — I notice you live in Long Beach. Poinsettias are susceptible to frost. Having been a forced plant it is more tender to frost. I hope you put the plant against the south wall of the house, the garden or the garage wall, where it gets the heat and the sun. They love the sun! can plant it in the garden as per the location mentioned. First soak the potted plant in a bucket of water with vitamin B-1 added. Several days later take the plant out of the pot, then carefully separate the individual plants. Pull them apart leaving as much soil around the roots as possible. Dig individual holes twice the size of the root ball. Fill the holes with water. Plant them when the water has disappeared into the soil. Mix half of some form of organic mulch material with half of the soil. Work in a teaspoon of bone meal or a fruit-flower maker fertilizer into the holes. Put the prepared soil into the holes and firm well for proper level planting. Proper level means the root balls tops are level with the surrounding ground. Place plants in the holes. Fill the prepared soil around the root balls and firm up to the ground level. Build rings of soil around each plant at the edge where the holes were dug to confine the water within the basins. First drink of water should be fortified with vitamin B-1. Keep moist a few days then water as needed.

Q. — Enclosed leaf of tree happened to grow in our backyard. Its about two feet tall. I'd like to know the name of it. Also can you recommend a fruit tree pruner? Walt Smacall, Long Beach.

A. — The specimen leaf is a fig. Foliage of seedling figs vary. I don't know of a fruit tree pruner in your locality, but suggest you check with your local nurseryman. Usually they know of horticultural specialists. If you can't locate one at this number, 438-5001 about 6 p.m. If he isn't doing it now, ask him to recommend someone. —Joe Littlefield

Jobs for gardeners

Be sure to rake up faded flowers of camellias off the ground, also hand pick off the ones that are fading. This is done to remove any possible camellia flower petal blight.

Don't clean off the fold foliage from gerberas (transvall daisies) because the tender young growth in the crowns might freeze.

Yes, water the lawn or plants if they're thirsty even though weather is cold with frost spells, but water in mid-morning.

Some lawns are kept constantly damp during the winter season, hence don't thrive as well as those allowed to thirst once in a while and then given a good drink of water.

Eastern peonies should be given a dosage of bone meal or a fruit-flower fertilizer, lightly scratched into the soil, then top dressed with a good grade of steer manure or a spread mulch material. (Soil must first be watered well before applying those ingredients, and watered in well after application.)

Old Farmer's Riddle: Which candles burn longer, the candles in a birthday cake or those in a candlestick? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: This bothers me. What becomes of the millions and millions of fish that die in the ocean? The ocean floor must be feet deep with them. The big ones eat the little ones, but they too have to die. M.F.S., Parsons, Kan.

You must have been reading that poem about the "great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em" and so on. Things don't work like that in the ocean. If a big fish gets crippled, it's more likely that several hundred little ones tackle him and clear him to the backbone. Whatever goes to the bottom, and there is plenty, works out just like fertilizer on a corn field. As a matter of fact, the bottom of the ocean raises a crop of vegetation every year or so.

Home Hint: Shake coarse salt on window sashes to prevent them from freezing... When a broom wears shorter on one side, dip it in hot water, trim it evenly with hedge shears and it will sweep better... Middle anaerics: They all burn shorter.

Mind-shattering experience

Reds describe B52 raids

By RICHARD BLYSTONE

SAIGON (AP) — Being caught by a B52 bomb strike is "like being dead for three seconds," says Le Van Hieu. He lived through six of them. "Truong Van Thang, who has survived a dozen, reports: 'Too many times and you lose your mind.' Strikes by the giant bombers are the most feared of American air attacks, but Hieu and Thang say ground soldiers, if brave, well-trained, and lucky, can live with them.

The war is over for these two men, ex-officers from North Vietnam. Both surrendered last year and are undergoing indoctrination at an Open Arms center in Saigon.

Their memories are vivid.

HIEU, in 22 years of Communist Service, and Thang, in 13, saw scores of B52 strikes, heard the whistle of bombs falling six miles through the air and the thunder when they hit. Each B52 in a three-plane mission spreads more than 100 bombs — 25 to 30 tons of explosives — over a swath half a mile wide and a mile-long and raises a curtain of black smoke that looks from afar like a forest fire.

"My first experience with the B52s was in December 1965," said Thang, 32. "It was near Plei Me, in the Central Highlands.

"When the spotter planes leave and the jungle goes quiet you know the B52s are coming. But you don't know when until the first bomb explodes.

"One bomb hit about 10 yards from a cave where I was hiding. Blood poured out of my ears. I was deaf for a month."

HIEU, 41, recalled his last B52 experience, in the Mekong Delta last November. "I was caught in the open when the first string of bombs hit. It was like a great wind. I was able to run to a bunker, but the second string hit closer, about 100 yards away.

"When a bomb hits farther away the concussion is like swaying in a hammock, but when it is close it is like an electric shock.

"You hear nothing. You are deaf and blind. You have no thoughts, no sensations, no feelings.

"Afterwards you stand up, trembling. No one speaks for a long time. Those who can, try to dig out their companions who have been trapped in bunkers. Some just sit where they were.

Hieu cannot hear his watch tick at his right ear, but he considers himself lucky. Many who have lived have been deafened permanently, and some have been driven mad.

"SOMETIMES the fear drives men to do strange things," Thang recalled. "Some rush around in their cave or even run outside. Once I saw a man dive into a bamboo thicket, and after the raid he couldn't get out.

"To survive you must be calm. You must not care whether you live or die. If you cannot control your emotions it does something to your mind.

"We have a man like that here. He was under too many B52 strikes. Every once in a while he will start jabbering wildly or break into song."

Hieu outlined his rules for physical survival in the battalion he commanded:

"I never stationed my soldiers in a straight line, always in a zigzag, with each platoon 300 to 400 yards from the next. We stayed away from deep valleys and mountain tops and we made our camps at least 200 yards from the nearest water.

"WE BUILT A-shaped bunkers with strong logs, sunk in so that the point was flush with ground level. They had a zig-zag floor plan, no more than four feet wide at the base. These could withstand a hit as close as five to seven yards away." The Viet Cong company of which Thang was deputy commander used A-shaped bunkers and U-shaped caves dug into mountainsides where even a direct hit would slide off.

"When a unit receives a direct hit, even though the bombs fall 100 to 200 yards apart, about 20 per cent are killed," said Hieu.

"Most are killed by the pressure, which crushes the chest and batters the soft parts of the body. They might live one or two days, but on the third day they die.

"To protect ourselves, if there were two or three men, we would sit or squat side by side, linking arms very tightly and keeping our knees and arms tightly locked over our bellies and chests. If you are alone you half kneel and half lie on one side with one knee protecting your stomach and your arms locked across your chest. If in a cave, you place your palms against the roof to brace yourself.

"AT FIRST, before we had experience, we would try to cover our ears, but we found that this made a man's brain explode so then we just forgot about the ears."

Both men said that occasionally their units received advance warning of B52 strikes from higher headquarters.

Neither could say where the intelligence came from.

"The Viet Cong must have had some connection with the American Command here, but I am really only guessing," said Thang.

The U.S. Command has consistently disputed defectors' claims about advance notice of B52 raids. Some officers have observed that it would be logical for enemy field headquarters to alert units to possible B52 raids, particularly when they were in customary enemy areas known to the allies or if their position were known as a result of a battle.

Move gains to block OK of Nixon cabinet appointees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A drive to block confirmation of Elliot L. Richardson and other cabinet nominees as a protest against the Vietnam war picked up support Friday, but Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott predicted Democrats "will climb off that high horse" before long.

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., said he may vote to reject Richardson because the Vietnam policies he has defended have "outraged our national sense of decency and shamed us before the world."

But Democrats trying to organize a filibuster against the nominations of Richardson and others acknowledged the effort was a long shot, despite approval of a resolution by the Senate Democratic caucus Thursday demanding a promise by all nominees to testify when called before congressional committees as a condition for their confirmation.

Scott, however, predicted there would never be a filibuster. "I can't believe they will be that ruthless," he said. "I think they will climb off that high horse."

Richardson and William P. Clements Jr., Nixon's nominee for deputy defense secretary, pledged this week in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, to be open and communicative with the committee.

Scott told newsmen no presidential nominee can be expected to make commitment to testify "unless authorized by the President." The best Congress can expect, he said, is that nominees will pledge to "come whenever we can without violating the scope of our instructions from the executive branch."

McIntyre blasted the administration's "scornful patronizing" of Congress and "arrogant silence" on the resumption of bombing raids during the holidays following the collapse of peace negotiations in Paris.

Unless he sees "convincing signs that further frustrations in the peace talks will not trigger more savage bombing of innocents," and unless Richardson pledges to seek changes in the current policy, "I may, indeed, have to vote against confirmation," McIntyre said.

"The war policies and tactics Mr. Richardson has had to defend have outraged our national sense of decency and shamed us before the world..."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, D-Ariz., also a member of the Armed Services Committee, said he was "sick and tired" of the Democrats' demands for a settlement, and said they should seek a constitutional amendment if they want to usurp the President's powers.

measures were in effect at "Pentagon East," the U.S. military headquarters at Tan Son Nhut airbase.

The sources said the steps were taken on the basis of intelligence reports that indicated Communist terrorists were intent on bombing the headquarters in retaliation for U.S. bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong last month.

The U.S. Command declined comment on the intelligence reports, but admitted in a statement that "increased security precautions" have been instituted.

'Passive Adjustment'

Fed ups interest rate to 5%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board boosted its discount rate, the interest rate it charges member banks for borrowing, from 4.5 per cent to 5 per cent Friday. The change is effective Monday.

The board issued a warning, however, that its action "is merely a passive adjustment" and should not lead to another round of increases in short term interest rates across the nation.

The central bank said that it was forced to increase the discount rate to move it into better alignment with other short term interest rates generally.

Nevertheless, the board's action confirms the recent upward push of interest rates on short term notes across the economy. It is the first time in more than a year that it has made a change in the discount rate.

All other short term interest rates are scaled upward from the discount rate. The board usually likes to keep it about one per cent below the prime interest rate, the rate that big commercial banks charge their biggest and best customers.

The central bank said that the current big gap between the discount rate and other short term rates has caused a sharp increase in borrowing from the federal reserve system in recent weeks.

It said in a statement that during the four weeks that ended Jan. 10, borrowings of member banks averaged $1.2 billion, about double the average for the period from early October through mid-December.

The Federal Reserve tried to make it clear in its announcement that the action represented no change in the nation's monetary policy, for which it is responsible. Some sources have said that because of President Nixon's move to voluntary wage price standards, the Federal Reserve would resort to a tighter monetary policy.

But the discount rate over the past several years has become less and less of a tool in determining monetary policy. The central bank has relied instead on controlling policy. The supply through buying and selling of the large portfolio of government securities that it owns.

PRICE-INCREASE FLURRY SEEN

(Continued from Page A-1) plished largely by adding another year to the base period, comes at a time when the administration was beginning to make headway in some of the more troublesome areas of inflation.

The price of lumber, for example, which had soared, has recently moderated. The Price Commission, which is being disbanded, pointed out that the lumber component of the Wholesale Price Index dropped to a 14-month low in December, due primarily to better compliance with Phase 2 regulations and the fact that much of the industry was approaching profit margin limits.

But analysts say the lumber industry is one that will benefit from the liberalized regulations of Phase 3, and gain increased flexibility to raise prices.

Among the executives expecting a surge of price increases was Glenn W. Inman, director of material for the Avco systems division of the Avco Corp. in Wilmington, Mass.

"We've got a boiling teakettle here, with a cover on it," he said. "It's better to take it off now than to try to keep it on and have it blow off later. Between now and April, we'll have a rash of these price increases. Over the next six months I think we'll see the rate of inflation get up to about 6 per cent."

Here are some samples from the guidelines:

Morality — "It is the educational responsibility of all school personnel to foster students' understanding of the fundamental moral values underlying American society. Our heritage and the laws of our nation reflect a common core of personal and social morality..."

Truth — "Telling the truth and expecting to be told the truth are essential to the development of personal self-esteem, basic friendships, genuine understanding of our society, its history and democratic processes..."

Patriotism — "Students should understand the origins of the nation, the principles of the Declaration of Independence and the ideals and hopes of the Founding Fathers... The public school should foster informed and dedicated concern for our country and its ideals..."

Religion — "The holding of the U.S. Supreme Court today plainly does not foreclose teaching about the holy scriptures or about the differences between religious sects in classes of literature or history. It is not permissible for public schools to sponsor the practice of religion; but legally it is permissible, and educationally there is a responsibility, to ensure that there is study about religion in the public schools."

The guidelines also contain some educational prohibitions enacted by the state Legislature, including these:

— "No teacher shall give instruction nor shall a school district sponsor any activity which reflects adversely upon persons because of their race, color, creed, national origin or ancestry."

— "No teacher giving instruction in any school, or on any property belonging to any agencies included in the public school system, shall advocate or teach communism with the intent to indoctrinate or to inculcate in the mind of any pupil a preference for communism."

— "While on the school grounds... a pupil shall refrain from... gambling, immorality, profanity and the use or possession of tobacco, intoxicating liquor, narcotics or hallucinogenic or dangerous drugs or substances."

Code changes urged for earthquake areas

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau
Provisions of the Uniform Building Code will have to be changed to safeguard property in areas that are subject to moderate or great earthquakes, a Long Beach city official warned a state committee on seismic safety in Los Angeles Friday.

E. M. O'Connor, the city's director of building, told the committee, headed by Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-Santa Clara, present requirements of the Uniform Building Code do not adequately recognize horizontal accelerations that buildings are subjected to and "completely ignore" loads induced by earthquakes from vertical acceleration.

He said the code should be amended to insure stresses induced in buildings be limited so as not to exceed the elastic range of the building materials involved.

IF THESE changes are made, "There is a strong possibility buildings designed under such criteria will be able to ride future moderate to great earthquakes in a way that they will be useful buildings afterward."

O'Connor said the code's earthquake resistant requirements also will have to be expanded to apply to all elements of buildings, such as ceilings, lighting fixtures, mounting and anchoring of equipment, elevators, emergency generators and the like.

O'Connor pointed out a recently designed 14-story building in the city of Long Beach was re-designed to increase earthquake - resistant capacity to twice the lateral resistive requirements of the Uniform Building Code.

HE SAID the increase in cost in the structural steel frame of the building was less than half of 1 per cent of the overall $22 million cost.

"If one half of 1 per cent in overall cost results in a building that will ride future earthquakes and remain a functional building, such is a small price to pay," O'Connor told the committee.

Alquist, in his opening remarks, said a bill will be introduced into the Legislature this year calling for increased safety of emergency service structures.

He said a more general need that is evident is an up-dating of building codes. "We understand that this is underway. However, the usual 5 to 6-year lag between the state-of-the-art and code requirements has become unacceptable," he said.

Post office revokes 'pranking' privilege

Lynwood postal officials, who last week delivered four 17-year-old letters to St Francis Hospital unraveled the delay Friday.

Mrs. Rose Nelson, who has finally claimed her "get well" cards postmarked in 1955 and delivered last week to the hospital where she was formerly a patient, told officials the letters were apparently mailed this year as a prank.

"I gave a box of old letters to some neighbor children," she explained. "I thought they would cut up the cards and play with them," she added, "but I've received several of them in the mail recently."

According to the recipient, apparently the only "cutting up" the kids did was on the way to the local mailbox, where they reposted the letters, shuffling them through the bewildered postal system.

"We knew there was something amiss," said the Lynwood Postmaster. "All of the letters bore canceled, three-cent 'Liberty' stamps, and since they were processed through another station before they got to us, they should've also been stamped 'Found in supposedly empty equipment,' the usual practice for mail of this type."

The postman said that if the letters had not already been canceled, they would have been marked "postage due," and Mrs. Nelson would have owed five cents apiece for the cards.

"But don't get the idea that you can mail letters for three cents and get away with it," he warned. "The Postal Service stays on top of these matters."

Berbower new president of Travelers Aid in L.B.

Raymond F. Berbower, assistant chief engineer of the Long Beach Harbor Department, has been elected president of the Travelers Aid Society of Long Beach for 1973.

Berbower succeeds Robert E. Kline, Long Beach police lieutenant.

Other 1973 officers are James Warren, vice president; Jack Cochrane, treasurer, and John Brooks, secretary.

They will be introduced at the society's annual meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Golden Sails Restaurant, 6285 E. Pacific Coast Hwy. David S. Saunders, regional manager of United Way for Region III, will be the speaker, and the Madrigal Singers of Long Beach City College will entertain.

Berbower has been a member of the board of directors of the Long Beach society for five years, and previously had served as treasurer. He also has been active as a committeeman with the Boy Scouts, is a past chairman of the YMCA Camping Branch, and is a past president of the Long Beach Rotary Club.

Travelers Aid Society, which last year provided financial and counseling aid to more than 10,000 travelers in Long Beach, is financed primarily by the United Way, plus private contributions.

Queen's tenant blasts rent

By LARRY LYNCH
Staff Writer

Problems plaguing the Queen Mary's shops and concessions were aired Friday when a boutique operator scheduled a press conference to complain of what she said is "the highest rental in a major tourist attraction in Southern California."

Mrs. Donna David, operator of the Charlie Girl Boutique, said that at the outset of leasing shipboard space "we thought we'd be rich in three years."

Instead, Mrs. David charged, rental costs and advertising, promotion and attendance problems are the reason "out of 32 shops, ten have vacated, and more will be forced to leave within the next months if a drastic change is not brought about."

Mrs. David's charges were disputed by Karl R. Jensen, vice president and general manager for Specialty Queen Mary Corp., master lessee for the ship's commercial areas.

Jensen said Specialty now leases shipboard locations to 50 shops and concessions. To date, he said, seven shops have vacated leased area and three operators who signed leases left before opening their doors.

"My assessment of the tenant situation at this point is that we're on a shakedown cruise. I don't see that we have that many problems," Jensen said.

LEASING fees charged by major tourist attractions, including Disneyland, are not public information, the executive said. "However, we have a tenant who used to be at Disneyland who said rents at Disneyland are now $30 a foot."

Mrs. David's list of complaints included charges of a lack of cleanliness aboard ship.

"The health department has been called in by the merchants in this regard, but nothing has been done," she said.

JENSEN responded that the allegations she detailed in the health and cleanliness area "are not true at all." He said that the ship does have logistic problems with the removal of waste food and paper particularly when large crowds are aboard, but "we have been doing a credible job" in solving these problems.

John Mansell, Long Beach city manager, said the ship is inspected regularly by the city health department and "is far above average in cleanliness and service to the public." Mansell noted that violations have been issued for such problems as "rest rooms that were open that shouldn't be open." The problems have been corrected and "the lady in question has never made a complaint," the city manager added.

Mrs. David said in detailing her complaints she represented only herself, but noted that there were five or six other dissatisfied merchants in attendance at her press conference.

SEVERAL other shop operators who were there said they had been served with eviction notices. Karl Napoli, operator of The Royal Enclosure import and antique shop, said quality of the Queen Mary development is "not what we were led to expect from the fact that Diners Club held the first master lease."

Specialty Queen Mary, a subsidiary of Specialty

Restaurants Corp., Long Beach, took over the master lease after Diners Club withdrew in 1970.

The dispute between some shop operators and specialty centers on how much back rent will be forgiven and how much the shop operators will be charged for common area maintenance, parking and county taxes.

These charges now total $6 a square foot for each shop operator.

The parties to the dispute agree that the fees, which are levied by the city of Long Beach, were not specified in original leases. Mrs. David maintained "verbal representations" indicated they would be much lower than they are.

Jensen of Specialty said the company has reached agreement with all but five tenants. Where agreement has been reached, minimum rent charges have been forgiven for a total of 11 months.

The company has sued two firms—Mrs. David's and Napoli's—for the non-payment of back rent.

Benefits of bed-rest study told

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Two research scientists with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration told a nursing symposium in Long Beach Friday how studies of prolonged bed rest are expected to benefit both medical science and the space program.

The researchers, John E. Greenleaf, Ph.D., and Bill A. Williams, Ph.D., both of the Ames Research Center, Moffett Field, Calif., spoke at a meeting sponsored by the Long Beach Heart Association in Edgewater Hyatt House Hotel.

One finding alone is expected to save a couple of million dollars for space researchers, Dr. Greenleaf remarked.

A study at the Ames Center showed that exercising the legs while supine can preserve the endurance capacity of the arms.

HE SAID that a special arm exerciser costing an estimated two to three million dollars had been planned for future spacecraft. Now, such a device may not be necessary.

Dr. Williams said that a transmitter capsule that can be swallowed enabled life scientists to measure body temperature constantly. And bed rest, it has been found, increases thermal sensitivity.

Specifically, a person begins sweating sooner if he's lying in bed.

The scientists also described a phenomenon known as recumbency diuresis. Here, the bed patient experiences an increased urinary output, but forcing fluids doesn't seem to correct the dehydration that results.

"The water just doesn't stay in the body," said

Dr. Greenleaf. "However, one Veterans Administration Hospital has been giving patients a saline solution, and in this way water is retained in the body."

DR. WILLIAMS outlined many of the changes that occur with prolonged bed rest. Some of them include loss of plasma volume, loss of heart volume, loss of mass of red blood cells, weakening of bone structure, wasting of muscles, loss of total bone mass, loss of calcium, altered levels of hormones, weight loss and increased nervousness.

Some of the astronauts, Dr. Greenleaf noted, lost 6 per cent of their body weight or up to 10 pounds while in space.

Part of their mission, the researchers said, is to find countermeasures that can benefit both the astronaut and the earthbound patient who has to remain at bed rest for long periods.

Exercises can be beneficial if done long enough, they said. Also, creating a lower body pressure around the body would "tend to take the blood to the ankles" and would work as an antideconditioning measure.

Manslaughter found in scalding death

A Norwalk Superior Judge Friday found Mrs. Eufilia De Leon, 36-year-old mother of eight, guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the scalding death of her 16-year-old daughter.

The verdict of Judge Gordon Ringer, who took the case under submission Monday afternoon following more than six weeks of testimony, carries a maximum sentence of 15 years in state prison.

Ringer had been considering four possible

Accused bandit pleads innocent of charges verdicts, in the court trial, including first degree murder-by-torture and second degree murder, in connection with the death of young Adelina De Leon sometime during the summer of 1971.

In explaining his involuntary manslaughter decision, sought by defense attorney Albert C.S. Ramsey, Ringer said he felt all witnesses for both defense and prosecution were biased, leaving him no choice but the lesser verdict.

The judge set Feb. 2 for Mrs. De Leon's probation and sentencing hearing. Juan De Leon, 36-year-old husband of the woman, also is charged in the daughter's death. His trial is scheduled to begin upon conclusion of Mrs. De Leon's.

In final arguments last week, Deputy Dist. Atty. Harold Prukop challenged the veracity of witnesses called by Ramsey in defense of the Artesia woman, Ramsey, in turn, suggested that the five De Leon children, who testified for the prosecution, should not be believed.

Each attorney pointed to discrepancies in the testimony of witnesses called by his opposition.

In his closing arguments, Ramsey said that testimony from the children was in agreement that Juan De Leon had bound Adelina hand and foot before a disciplinary incident in which the girl was scalded in a steaming tub of water.

It was Mrs. De Leon who pulled Adelina out of the tub and applied medication, Ramsey said.

The child died without seeing a doctor despite the fact that her burns were visibly infected and her condition deteriorated rapidly after the incident, according to testimony.

A body believed to be that of the missing girl was discovered in Riverside County in September, 1971, and police arrested the parents for murder last April 5 after Mrs. De Leon led them to a spot within a few feet of where the body was found, officers reported.

De Leon, whose trial now will be scheduled, previously was ruled insane, then declared sane two months later.

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Social contacts widen, include many unfamiliar types, require care and selectivity. Today's natives invariably seek abstract truth in preference to pragmatic adjustments.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Break out of your habitual grooves, seek an amusement area for talks with loved ones, family reconciliations where needed.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be up and about early so as to carry your fair share in community customs. It promises to be a mildly interesting Sunday.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Make all the rounds, catch up on all the news, being very selective about what you add to the local history.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): If you have the facility, move those you care for out of the usual Sunday schedule and into a special one-day vacation.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Your appearance and participation count in the affairs of the community about you, for mutual benefit. Take a good lazy break.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put the recent past out of your mind, pursue fresh interests, hobbies. Best is likely what you most need, help yourself.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It seems you are continuously on the go, right in the middle of local action with all significant expression visible to all.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Now, while close associates and loved ones are in a good humor, move on with your plans, get everybody involved and interested.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There are strong ties pulling you toward home and those you care about. Turn aside from business.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Recent developments offer reasons for adjusting personal habits. Have a care for the thoughts of others as you go.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some formality must be fulfilled. This is one of those times when the least you can do is the best, but with precision.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Gather good friends and loved ones about you for a quietly active Sunday. Conversation builds, includes plenty of wild stories.

Catholic leaders OK Key 73 unity

By LES RODNEY

Roman Catholics can cooperate with Key 73's evangelistic efforts without compromising their own convictions.

So says a summary of the program appearing in some Catholic church publications for the consideration of parishioners. It is published with ecclesiastical approval.

No Long Beach Catholic churches have yet formally entered into the planned local cooperative activities around Key 73. So far as the national hierarchy is concerned, the way is obviously open for parishes which choose to participate to do so.

"ALTHOUGH KEY 73 began with Protestants," the article appearing in church weeklies explains, "there is nothing specifically Protestant in its basic ideas. The program has been made sufficiently general that all, Protestants and Catholics alike, can participate."

Key 73, the article adds, has the approval of St. Louis's Cardinal Cerebery, in whose diocese the national office is located. "Bishop Charles Helmsing, chairman of the Bishops' Ecumenical and Inter-religious Committee, has recommended participation as a means by which Catholics can show their zeal in missionary activity."

With the slogan "Calling Our Continent to Christ," Key 73's proclaimed goal is nothing less than "Christians working together to share Christ with every person in North America." In addition to those who are usually characterized as Protestant evangelicals, Key's executive committee includes people from "mainstream" denominations such as the United Methodists, Presbyterians and American Baptists. Its executive director, Rev. Dr. Theodore Raedeke, is a Missouri Synod Lutheran.

"Every Catholic should be acquainted with the meaning and objective of this program," says the article in the church bulletins, "since he will undoubtedly encounter many references to it during this year."

"Every church or denomination is free to develop its own separate program or thrust. By their cooperation in this program, Catholics will not be expected to compromise their convictions or to change their religious life style. They are merely called upon to revitalize their own faith in Christ and, both clergy and laity, to share that faith with others."

THIS, THE article continues, is completely in line with the papal statement that every Catholic is an apostle. And it is in accordance with Vatican Council II, which emphasized "the responsibility of all Catholics to share in the apostolic mission of the Church."

Further laying the theological groundwork for participation, the article reminds "It is in accord with the words of Christ himself who said 'Go forth and teach all nations."

Giving some idea of the unprecedented scope of the campaign, the article says "Think of the impact this could have on the people of our continent, especially the one hundred million who are thus to be confronted with the claims of Christ!"

This tremendous effort, it says, "can be met only through a coordinated and cooperative effort."

"It remains to be seen whether Key 73 will meet success or failure. This will depend eventually on the efforts of local congregations, and individuals. Nevertheless, a program whose aim is to make every person in North America aware of Jesus Christ as God's Son and their Savior is surely worthy of our prayers and our help."

AT LEAST one local Catholic church, St. Cornelius, devoted two of the four pages of its weekly program bulletin publication to this statement on Key 73. It has reportedly been well received.

Neighborhood prayer rallies in churches in 12 parts of the Greater Long Beach area will launch Key 73 here on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 28th. The local Steering Committee last week approved purchase of sufficient Scripture packets from the American Bible Society for distribution to every home in Long Beach. This will be undertaken during the month of March, leading up to Easter.

Southland church council backs the President on negotiations, but asks no more bombings

The Southern California Council of Churches this week backed President Nixon's resumption of negotiations on Vietnam and urged that they be completed without further bombing of Indochina. The statement in full:

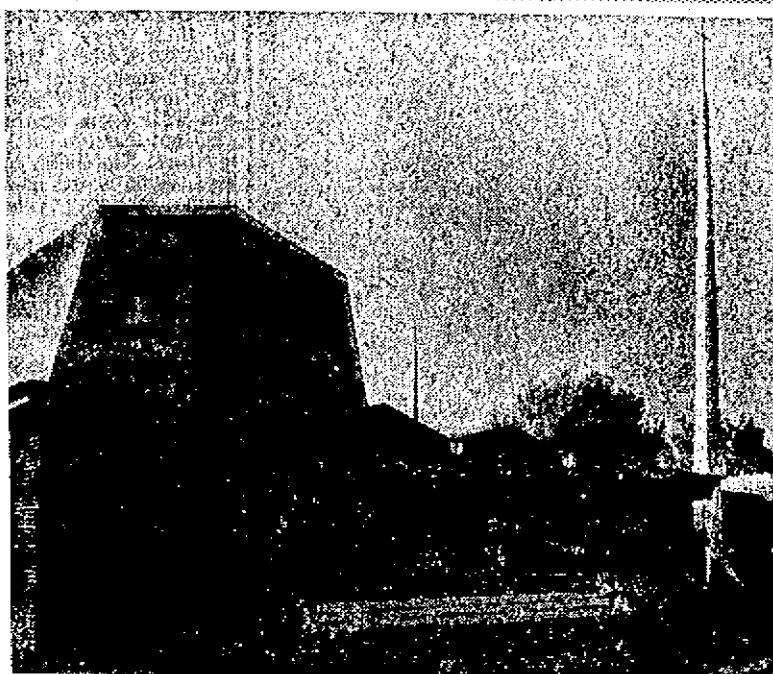

The General Board of the Southern California Council of Churches, meeting at the Hollywood Beverly Christian Church, recognizes the difficult role of the President of our country in this time of international conflict and strongly supports him and other national leaders in the renewal of negotiations for a peace settlement in Vietnam.

We urge that these negotiations be carried to a conclusion without further bombing in Indochina by United States Armed Forces. We also join many national legislators in raising the question of continuing financial appropriations for the war effort in Southeast Asia.

We urge the constituent denominations of the Southern California Council of Churches to consider making a similar statement to be sent to national leaders and denominational colleagues.

ALL BUT LANDSCAPING COMPLETED AT PARKCREST

Dedication Sunday for $390,000 Parkcrest Church of Christ edifice

Dedication of the new Parkcrest Church of Christ sanctuary will be formally climaxed Sunday at 2:45 p.m., with Alger Fitch Jr., former minister, bringing the dedication message.

The $390,000 building includes a handsome 600 seat sanctuary with additional space for 100 choir members, several classrooms, a choir rehearsal hall, baptistry and robing rooms, church library and new complex of staff offices.

Organist Dorothy Bryar of Inglewood will play concerts on the new Rogers organ tonight at 7:15 and at the Sunday dedication. There is also a new concert piano and a built-in public address and audio visual system.

The church, at 5950 Parkcrest Ave., was started in 1952 and has been instrumental in starting other congregations in La Mirada, Lakewood and Cerritos, as well as conducting a strong foreign mission ministry. The preaching minister, Lester Ragland, is in his 10th year at the church.

Calls pessimism 'tragic'

Consensus on all but structure seen by COCU leader

SAN FRANCISCO — Speaking on an historic anniversary, the general secretary of the Consultation on Church Union asserted here this week that more than 3,000 responses to COCU's plan of union indicate there no longer are any "Christian" reasons for divisions between the churches.

Rev. Paul A. Crow, Jr., told the congregation at Grace Cathedral (Episcopal) that an "unprecedented theological consensus" is evident on matters of faith, scripture, tradition, sacraments, membership, and ministry. Most criticism of the union plan, he said, is at the point of structure.

"For the first time a diverse spectrum of the American churches can proclaim this consensus, and is under the immediate mandate to ask what this fact means for their relationships now," the COCU leader said.

"It means there are no Christian reasons for the continued division among the churches. Could this convergence be the basis for going beyond conversations to more intimate relations of ministry and membership and mission even though still short of actual union?"

"Why cannot this consensus be the cause for some bold actions that would bring us together?" Dr. Crow reiterated a proposal he made a year ago that COCU churches and other Christian congregations begin gathering together on a regular basis to observe the Lord's Supper.

Acknowledging voices that say COCU is dead, Dr. Crow declared that he had counted in the public media 36 other parts of American life upon which the judgment of death were pronounced, including baseball, the dollar, chamber music, the novel, and psychoanalysis.

"The mood of pessimism about COCU's work," he went on, "may tell more about American Christians than it does about church union. The tragedy is we may be in danger of forgetting the power of Christian expectation, and so deprive ourselves of God's great gifts."

Their noted adult and youth choirs will be joined in the hymn festival by choirs of other predominately black churches, as well as musical groups from First Presbyterian of Lakewood, Bayshore Community Congregational, First Church of the Brethren and Christ Lutheran.

Prayers and excerpts from the writings and sermons of Dr. King will be shared by participating pastors.

Jewish reservations about Key 73 campaigns brings Christian reactions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer.

Christianity, the offspring of Judaism, generally has quit trying to absorb its mother faith. But pockets of that old impulse persist. And some Jewish leaders fear it may be abetted by a newly launched, interdenominational drive to bolster Christianity in the nation.

The issue, a sensitive nerve in religious history, has surfaced strongly with the start of "Key '73," a year-long, ecumenical effort in the United States and Canada to "call our continent to Christ."

Although backed by the widest spectrum of Roman Catholic and Protestant churches to join in a common endeavor in modern times, it also has aroused uneasiness in various quarters, Christian as well as Jewish, about their relationship.

"SOME JEWS have to be nervous about the movement's nut fringes," comments the ecumenical weekly, Christian Century. Although it generally endorses the drive as a potential stimulus to "religion of the heart" at a time when this is keenly needed, the periodical adds:

"With 100 million uncommitted Americans out there, it does seem weird that some Christian evangelists feel that more theological Brownie points can be scored by landing or uprooting living, breathing Jews."

Basically, the issue involves not only the relationships between Judaism and Christianity, but the validity of their respective faiths and the right objectives of proselytizing activities.

"Theoretically, the possibility of a limited kind of 'two way traffic' must be granted" between church and synagogue, says Rabbi Jakob Petuchowski of Cincinnati's Hebrew Union College Jewish Institute of Religion. But he adds that this should not be the direct intent of either side in trying to strengthen religious commitment in a widely nonbelieving generation.

He and many Christian scholars maintain that to try specifically to get devoutly believing Jews or Christians to switch camps is a distortion of their purposes and slurs an allied faith — but such switches sometimes happen in the necessary free presentation of ideas seeking to persuade the irreligious.

THESE THEOLO-

GIANS contend that the two, interrelated faiths both are valid, both permanent living sources of truth; Judaism for Jews and Christianity for gentiles to whom Jesus extended the prior Jewish heritage on belief in one, universal God.

"Remember, it is not you that supports the root, but the root that supports you," the apostle Paul wrote to Roman Christians about Judaism. "All Israel will be saved."

In the last quarter century, with more Jewish-Christian interexchange and Christianity's deepening recognition of its founding ties in Judaism, most major denominations have dropped past activities specifically aimed at converting Jews.

But such programs continue among some evangelical groups, including the "Jews for Jesus" wing of the Jesus movement among young people outside regular church organizations.

Numerous Jewish leaders have voiced anxieties that "key '73," in which many independent evangelical groups along with mainline denominations are participating, could whip up heightened efforts to convert Jews to Christianity.

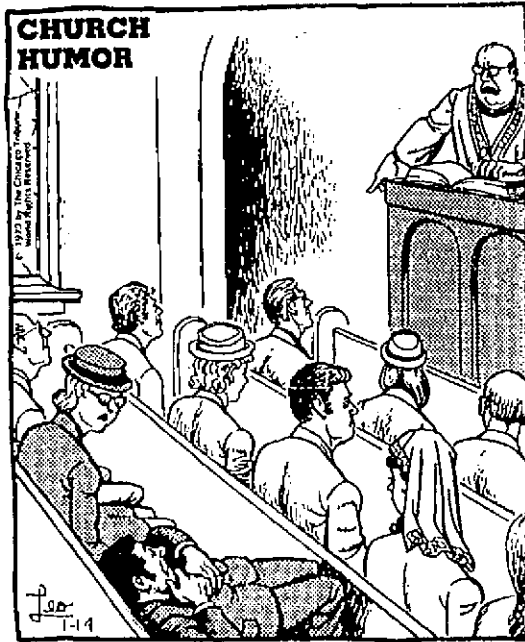

It is "bound to induce jitters in the Jewish community," says Rabbi Solomon S. Bernards, director of interreligious cooperation of the Anti Defamation League, recalling the medieval Christian use of torture and coercion for conversion purposes.

AT THE SAME time, various church leaders active in "Key '73" have emphasized that religiously committed Jews are not the target of the drive.

"There is no anti-Semitism in either the ideology or thrust of 'Key '73,'" says Rev. Dr. Theodore Raedeke of St. Louis, executive director of the effort. "We do not wish to persecute, pressure or force Jews to believe anything against their will."

But neither will Jews be excluded, he added. Raedeke says he's surprised that anyone should consider it an anti-Semitic act for Christians to attempt "in love" to tell Jews why they believe Jesus was the Messiah, whose coming was foretold in Hebrew prophecy.

THE RELIGION New Writers Association vote on the top religious stories of '72 wound up with the row in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod rated number one.

"For heaven's sakes, he's not talking about you personally!"

Sickness is a schoolmaster and friend to a man's soul. Why? 1) It reminds men of death. 2) It makes men think seriously of God. 3) It softens men's hearts. 4) It levels and humbles us. 5) It tries men's religion. Therefore, let's not talk against sickness. We need to thank God for it, because it is God's witness and way of purifying us for an eternal day with Him where there is no more suffering.

FROM THE PULPIT

Dr. Frank Collins

D. Stuart Briscoe says in his book Living Dangerously, "Some dead men will read these pages. That does not mean that they are peculiar people. Actually, they are very ordinary, for the world has a large population of dead people." The Bible says that natural men are dead in trespasses and sins and has not eternal life until he receives Christ as Saviour. The Bible also says that people who are saved... have been quickened (made alive, brought forth from spiritual death) who WERE dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1

Dead men have no appetite. Thus they desire not the milk or meat of the Word. We weary ourselves out by trying to feed people who have no appetite. It is an alarming fact when there is no hunger and thirst after righteousness.

Dead men have no activity. They look upon the work of the church as an imposition. They neither want to labour nor do they want saved members of their families to be active in church.

Dead men have no awareness. Although they have had no personal experience with Christ, they insist "I'm alright. I don't need to be saved."

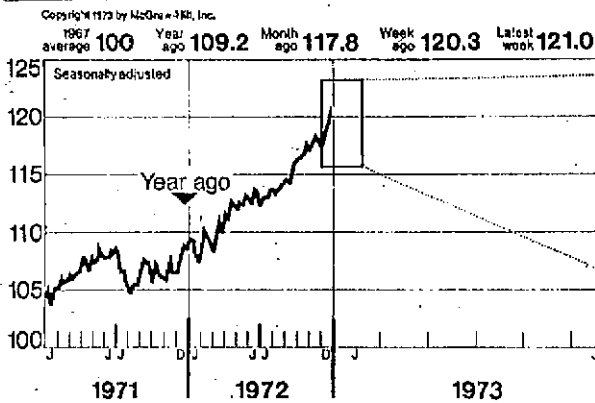

What is the answer for dead men? The preaching of the gospel, the witness of the saved and the work of the Holy Spirit. These are God's workers, sowers, surgeons, and spiritual obstetricians. God does save the willing. Resistance is the implement of the devil.

Therefore, when someone invites you to attend a gospel preaching church, by all means accept the invitation. It may mean the difference between life and death. Come to Calvary! Calvary is for you!

INDUSTRY WEEK

Executives look younger

Gray hair is on the verge of disappearing as a distinctive mark of the nation's business and industrial executive suites.

Through liberalized pension plans, corporations are increasingly making early retirement financially possible and attractive.

Companies approaching changes in top management structure are requiring retirement from operational responsibilities at age 60 in line with a general movement in the nation toward earlier retirement. Related to this is a growing trend toward more youthful top management teams at the operational level, reflecting the pressure from younger executives eager for more responsibility, authority, and challenge, Industry Week magazine has noted.

The pressure from younger executives is expected to grow, because by 1975 the nation will feel the impact of the baby-boom. There will be a large supply of managerial talent. The move to earlier retirement would be one way of making room for and utilizing the surplus of younger managers.

THE MOVE TOWARD EARLIER retirement from the executive suite first became visible during the recent recession as companies sought ways to shed surplus or obsolete management talent and to cut costs, but it can be attributed only in part to the recession. A basic structural change is occurring at the corporate level.

As this change becomes more clearly visible over the rest of this decade, men will reach the top at an earlier average age and retire earlier as well, Industry Week added.

The trend toward earlier retirement has raised the question of whether new functions will be developing which can best be filled by those becoming subject to mandatory early retirement policies on the operating level. To some, the answer is a definite "yes."

Top executives freed from operational responsibilities might do one of two things — leave their companies, or stay on in an exciting new dimension in corporate management activity — the postoperational, policy-formulating field.

An executive retiring at 60 and leaving his company would be free to do as he chooses — do nothing, or embark on a second career. He would be in a financial position to follow his inclination.

AN EXECUTIVE RELINQUISHING the operational reins at age 60 but staying with his company might turn his talents to studies of broad problem areas which are important to society as well as to the corporation's long-range future. Such areas might include technologies of the future, a developing nation strategy, world energy sources, government relations and education.

Mandatory early retirement with its implication of a possibly shorter tenure for chief executives has its foes as well as its adherents. More specifically, the tendency to select 60 as the mandatory retirement age receives far from unanimous approval even though 60 does appear to be well on the way to becoming the new "average" retirement age.

New B of A office to rise on Cherry at South

Plans for a new Bank of America office on Cherry Street near South Avenue in Long Beach were announced this week by Regional Vice President H. H. Jackson.

Working drawings are underway, he said, for an 11,700-square-foot free-standing mezzanine structure north of Zody's department store. The proposed $518,900 project will replace the bank's temporary office at Cherry and Poppy Street, three blocks north.

Initial plans call for a 13-station teller line, a commercial deposit section and spacious office, safe deposit and customer reception areas. It also will include two walk-up and two drive-thru teller stations. Parking will be provided in the adjacent Zody's lot.

The existing Cherry-Poppy office opened in 1970.

Architects for the project are Hugh and Donald Gibbs of Long Beach.

Colley new president of M&M Association

Walter M. Colley, 48, president and chief executive officer of Pacific Clay Products, Division, Pacific Holding Corporation, has been elected president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association at the group's annual organizational meeting in Los Angeles.

Colley, a member of the M&M board of directors for nine years and treasurer for two, becomes the 38th president of the 76-year-old organization which specializes in providing human resource management support services to its more than 2,000 member organizations.

In assuming leadership of the association, Colley succeeds J. Murray Yunker who was named chairman of the executive committee. Yunker, M&M president in 1971 and 1972, is president of Certified Grocers of California, Ltd.

Speaking to members following his election, Colley named "inflation" as a major domestic problem in 1973. "If we are to build a secure future," he stated, "we must find ways to achieve a stable economic growth pattern."

Rubber industry boom to continue through '73

The rubber industry is emerging from a strong 1972 and will enter the new year with great momentum, the chief executive of the world's largest rubber company predicted.

"We're beginning 1973 with a better balanced economy than we've had in a long time," said Russell DeYoung, chairman of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

The outlook for continued growth and records in the transportation area is particularly bright, he said. DeYoung cited healthy auto production, booming demand for trucks, mobile homes and recreational vehicles, and a resurging farm equipment market.

These factors will generate a record demand for tires, he said, predicting that auto tire shipments in the U. S. market will top 200 million units for the first time ever. Shipments in 1972 will be 198 million.

Auto makers will require 52 million tires next year for new cars, and the motoring public will buy another 153 million new replacement units, with the latter market rising 12 per cent to $5.2 billion in sales.

Motorists, DeYoung stated, are upgrading their tire purchases as the emphasis on safety causes a growing preference for belted tires.

The radial auto tires, which accounted for about 8 per cent of the total U.S. market this year, will continue to expand its sales, but so will the bias-belted tire. Both will narrow the demand for the less expensive bias ply, he said.

Kubota Tractor opens

A modern, 20,000-square-foot office-warehouse complex, designed to headquarter the recently formed Kubota Tractor Corporation's U.S. operations, has been opened at 300 W. Carol St., Compton.

The new facility, in addition to warehousing the company's full line of tractors, engines, parts and equipment for its American market, will house the executive offices of Kubota's U.S. and Canadian operations and will also function as a regional distribution center for the Pacific Southwest.

Serving the U.S. compact tractor field with 17 h.p., 21 h.p. and 26 h.p. models, Kubota sales in this country are near the $8 million mark annually.

Demand for its heavy duty tractors in the "in-between" category has seen Kubota's remarkable growth pattern, in only four years of U.S. operations, build up a sales network of nearly 500 dealers.

Representing the parent firms from Japan at the dedication were Ginzo Miyaji, executive managing director of Kubota, Ltd., Osaka, and Shigeo Yano, managing director of the Marubeni Corporation in Tokyo.

BUSINESS MIRROR

SEC policy for projections slips

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Analyst
NEW YORK — Almost every investor understands that corporations, like every product of creation or manufacture, have a past, present and future, and that each must be considered in making a decision.

The past tells the investor about the company's record, the present discloses if it is being maintained. Both are important items, but it is the unknown, the future, that fascinates, for that is where the money is made.

There has never been a successful broker who kept his eye on only the past and present. The world of investments is meaningful only in the context of the future. Otherwise it is unreal.

Nevertheless, the official policy of the Securities and Exchange Commission for nearly 40 years has required corporations to list massive amounts of data on the past and present while refusing to record projections.

THAT policy may soon change, however. Hearings recently were concluded in Washington to consider abandonment of the Old SEC policy and permit companies to record their estimates of future earnings.

Policy recommendations often take weeks to formulate, but there is speculation that this will be a speedy decision. The matter is close to Chairman William Casey's heart, and he must soon leave for the State Department.

Revealed in the hearings were lawyers' fears of legal consequences of projections, the concern of officers about standards to be used, the doubts of accountants as to their role and responsibility.

One of the most consistent products was misunderstanding. As Casey said in an interview last week:

"All we are doing is re-evaluating now our policy of prohibiting them. We are not demanding that forecasts be made. We are not going to mandate them. In my opinion, that is not a possibility nor is it desirable."

A FAR more likely solution will be to give companies the option to project or not to project, assuming that standards can be set so as to prevent flagrant abuses in the form of unrealistic goals.

Why then the furor? A good question and one that relates directly to the small investor and public confidence in the market place, which is now gradually being restored following one debacle after another.

As the chairman testified: "These projections are being put out now and they are being made available on a preferential basis." That is, they are being made unofficially or by informed brokers and offered to a favored few.

"No matter how one may theorize on this," Casey said at the hearings, "We have the reality that earnings estimates are made."

Moreover, he continued, "investors and stock values do react to them, and fairness to investors may call for making them evenly available to all investors."

Rather than, it is suggested, to only a select list of insiders, analysts, big customers, creditors, subscribers to services and the like, who are then afforded an advantage in decision making.

STILL another consideration enters: If the corporation itself makes a projection for internal use, and bases its budgets and planning on the projection, doesn't it become an ingredient also of any sound investment decision?

If projections are so relevant to stock prices and investment decisions, why continue to ban them in official filings at the SEC? Especially while unofficial and often misleading estimates circulate widely?

The forthcoming decision not only will be relevant to every small investor, but it will determine whether the future, the reality, is to be recognized or ignored.

Western Opera Theater, which features young professional artists employed on a full-time basis, first appeared at Orange Coast College last year when they staged a very popular version of Rossini's "La Cenerentola."

The touring company, which was created in 1967 through a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, presents fully staged productions of complete operas, emphasizing a contemporary approach to the theater. Most foreign language works are sung in lively English translations.

"LA TRAVIATA," which caused a great scandal when it was first produced in Vienna in 1853, is based on Alexander Dumas' novel, "The Lady of the Camellias," and relates the tragic love affair between a famous Parisian courtesan and a titled French nobleman.

For today's younger audiences it has been described as portraying the struggle between the establishment and the counterculture, as well as the struggle between parents and children.

Fox names Rob Cohen

Rob Cohen has been named to the new position of director of television movies for 20th Century-Fox TV.

William Self, president, said that the appointment was in line with the company's new accent on movies for television.

Nine projects are being developed for ABC and CBS, Self said, and all will be under the supervision of Cohen.

Cohen for the last eight months has been a program executive with Richard Berger, director of programming for 20th Century-Fox Television. A Harvard graduate, he was previously associated as a writer with Martin Jurov, and with Mike Medavoy at International Famous Agency.

Super Bowl opponents super losers

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

You've heard of an opponent being outmatched. Well, give a thought to Sunday's Super Bowl game.

Oh, I'm not talking about either of the teams in the battle to decide the champion of professional football. The Washington Redskins and the Miami Dolphins are both fine teams, and the outcome could go either way.

But you might wish to shed a tear or two for the programs (and their sponsors) that will be competing for TV viewers against NBC's Super Bowl VII coverage from 12:30 to about 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

Now, here we've got some real underdogs!

Poor Hubert Humphrey. He came very close to beating Richard Nixon for the presidency in 1968, but he won't stand a chance against the Dolphins and the Redskins. Yes, Hubert is scheduled to be the guest on ABC's "Issues and Answers" at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Why, not even George McGovern took the licking he faces.

When the game starts, at 12:30, Channel 2 will have in opposition a 1953 movie, "Second Chance," which won't stand a chance.

Channel 5 will be offering a college basketball game, North Carolina State against Maryland; Channel 7 will present "Bullwinkle"; Channel 9 will be in the middle of a 1945 movie, "Sudan"; Channel 11 will be offering a 1940 movie, "Young People," and Channel 13 will present "Open Forum."

Will anybody be watching them?

Not many viewers, that's for sure. Most eyes in this area will be focused on Channel 4, Super Bowl VII is expected to attract the largest audience in sports history, and probably the largest in the history of entertainment—more than 75 million viewers. Last year's Super Bowl, with 74 million viewers, is second in the all-time Nielsen ratings to Bob Hope's 1970 Christmas tour show.

NBC (Channel 4) will be on the air for 90 minutes before kickoff with pregame shows about this and previous years' Super Bowl games, and will have a postgame show starting at about 3:30—five hours of football.

Because the Los Angeles Coliseum was a sellout 10 days in advance, the National Football League lifted the local area blackout and opened the game to TV viewers in this area.

KFI (640) will carry the game on radio.

May the better team emerge triumphant!

TONIGHT, one of the world's most enduring performers makes her first appearance on a U. S. television special in "Marlene Dietrich—I Wish You Love," which airs from 10 to 11 p.m. on CBS (Channel 2).

The program is a TV version of her acclaimed one-woman theatrical show which has occupied most of her attention for the past 19 years. It was taped before a black-tie audience on the stage of the New London Theatre in Drury Lane, London.

Musical arrangements are by Burt Bacharach, whom Marlene first picked to be her arranger and accompanist in the days before he became famous.

More than a musical special, the show is also a musical autobiography. It is devoted entirely to Marlene's singing, but the songs themselves tell much of Miss Dietrich's life story, as she explains when introducing them.

THE IMPORTANCE is apparent when the members of the winning team art being paid $15,000 each and the losers $7,500. TV sponsors must sell a lot of beer, razor blades and tires to meet the cost, and nobody would know which brands to buy unless their interest were aroused enough to watch the game.

Allen has been accused from time to time of giving wrong information. His latest infraction is for giving out none at all.

Allen, according to Rozelle, failed to inform the N.F.L. office that guard John Wilbur, a former Ram, would not play in the Dec. 24 divisional playoff game with the Green Bay Packers.

Wilbur was sidelined with a kidney ailment, the game with the Packers, yet Allen continued to list him in the starting unit. He didn't reveal that Wilbur wouldn't play until the morning of the game.

This violates NFL rules which provide that coaches disclose illnesses and injuries to their players or be fined. Thus, Allen will be fined, a penalty believed to be in the neighborhood of $2,000.

Rozelle has dipped into Allen's pocketbook before. Last summer the commissioner docked Allen $5,000 when the general manager-coach of the Redskins chose to trade away several draft choices he too."

When queried, the commissioner declined to reveal who else, if anyone, had been fined. Rozelle did say that probably a dozen $5,000 fines for various things have been levied in the last 10 years.

The illegal trading of draft choices particularly upset NFL coaches and general managers, Rozelle admitted, "and there was a very strong feeling against him at our league meetings in Hawaii. No, one wanted to kick him out of the game because of it."

COACHING NO FUN, SO SCHMIDT QUILTS

Combined News Services
DETROIT — Joe Schmidt, a defensive superstar who never found coaching as easy as linebacking, resigned Friday as head coach of the Detroit Lions after six seasons of attempting to mold a championship team.

The reserved Schmidt, 40, said he quit because "coaching isn't fun anymore," but it was never too much fun for the stocky blond who anchored the famous Lion defenses of the 1950s.

"I really don't enjoy coaching any more. It's a burden more than fun and just a game."

"Another reason is my family," he said. "My family is very important to me. The pressures of coaching got to them."

"We have been a contender the last four years. Unfortunately, we haven't accomplished what I set out to do. Football is winning the Super Bowl. I haven't done that."

"I don't enjoy coaching. The only two good things in football are being a player and owner. Everything else is between is so-so."

St. Anthony loses in final seconds

By KEN PIVERNETZ

Friday night was the wrong time for St. Anthony High to be beaten at its own game.

The host Saints, hoping to get off to a good start in Angelus League competition, were surprised by Bishop Amat, 47-45, as 6-foot 7 Steve Funk sank two free throws in the final second to account for the winning points.

Bishop Amat, a disappointment in some of its earlier outings due in part to injuries, led only three times in handing the Saints their sixth loss in 15 games.

The Lancers from LaPue scored the game's first four points, then didn't nudge ahead again until the last 1:46 when Kirk Herrick drove the lane to make it 45-43.

Steve Korte sank two free throws to draw the Saints even again at 1:29, but the visitors pulled a familiar Saint ploy, stalling the final 89 seconds before Funk drove the middle and was fouled by Joe Lotta in the act of shooting.

Lotta and the Saints wanted to foul before the Lancers got off the shot, since they still had one more personal to give away before getting into the one-and-one free throw situation.

Funk was equal to the challenge. He led all scorers with 17 points.

Brian Lenzen got St. Anthony off to a good start, sinking four of five jumpers from outside 15 feet in the first quarter as his team pulled ahead 16-11.

Lenzen quickly drew three fouls, went to the bench with five minutes to go in the half and didn't have another field goal the rest of the evening.

With Dan Marques' having a bad night shooting and Steve Korte hounded, the Saints stayed in front on inspired play by Russell Belzaira, who enjoyed his best game in nearly a month with 12 points and 17 rebounds.

Korte, shadowed most of the time by football star Tony Hernandez, managed only five shots, hitting four.

The Saints scored only the two free throws by Korte in the final 3:29 after Belzaira had put his team ahead 43-40 on a tipin.

Baylor top candidate for Seattle job

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Now that Tom Nissalke has been fired at Seattle, Elgin Baylor is the prime candidate to become the new coach. But the former Laker great would never take the job unless attorney, friend and confidante Fred Rosenthal could "make it right."

Rosenthal regards the Seattle situation as "a snake pit kind of environment no coach would welcome... and I don't want Elgin plugged into a position that is destined to fail." Translation: Sam Schulman, the Seattle owner, must clean house if he expects to sign Baylor.

Just how crucial Rosenthal is to the negotiations can be substantiated by a Baylor admission that he has not negotiated with Schulman. Rosenthal admitted Friday, "I've dealt extensively with him."

I believe Baylor will take the job, effective next season. Why? Rosenthal puts it best when he says,

INSIDE PRO BASKETBALL

"Elgin wants to coach, he loves Seattle and he belongs in basketball." What Rosenthal probably wants for Baylor is a long-term contract and a free hand in dealing away players, and on those counts, Schulman should oblige.

Incidentally, Baylor has a nationally syndicated radio show Tuesdays and Thursdays (10 a.m.) on a leading black station, KGFJ; plays a lot of tennis; operates three Pioneer chicken franchises; keeps trim playing basketball for the Johnny Brown All-Stars; and hopes to be rehired by ABC for regional NBA games later in the season.

QUOTABLE QUOTES: — Gene Shue, Baltimore coach, on Dave Cowens: "Hes why Boston is so strong. The Celtics have always been a good fast break team. But Bill Russell didn't run much — he picked his spots. Cowens is a super hustler. Most players can't play the way he does every night. His style is more common to the little man, which he isn't."

— Rick Barry, comparing Sidney Wicks and ADA star John Erving. Sidney's the best I've faced this year because of his strength. But as good as Wicks is, Erving can do more things. Wicks is great, Erving is incredible."

— Chet Walker, on the demise of the 76ers: "Their owner, Irv Kosloff, is just too nice a guy. He tries to be so fair with everyone, but he probably has a tendency to be influenced by persons not equipped to make the right decisions."

— Bob Woolf, attorney and agent for John Havlicek: "I estimate the average NBA salary at $72,000, with 54 players collecting $100,000 or more. Youngsters graduating from college seldom know what to do with big money, or the tax ramifications attendant with such big paychecks. They must be cautioned against rushing out to buy those $20,000 Rolls Royces and warned against the greed of so-called sports fringe people who try to part the athlete from his money."

Warriors stay close

Combined News Services

Golden State stayed 3 games behind the Lakers in the National Basketball Assn.'s Pacific Division Friday night thanks to Rick Barry.

Barry hit two field goals and a pair of free throws in the final two minutes, helping the Warriors nudge Phoenix, 108-107, snapping a 5-game home court winning streak for the Suns.

In another close one, Earl Monroe calmly fired in a 13-foot jumper over Houston's Jimmy Walker as the buzzer sounded, enabling the New York Knicks to post a 104-103 victory. Hal Greer of Philadelphia also scored at the buzzer, but his basket only tied the game with Cleveland and the down-trodden 76ers went on to succumb in double overtime, 113-109.

John Beetham, playing on his home course at the Yorba Linda Country Club, captured the second weekly $25,000 Western Tournament Golf Assn. event Friday on the second hole of a sudden death playoff with Roger Maltbie of San Jose.

Beetham and Maltbie were tied at two-under par 142 after the second round, delayed from Tuesday by rain. Both parred the first playoff hole but on the second Maltbie took a bogey 5 after his tee shot hit a tree.

Beetham collected $5,000 for his victory.

The $20,000 race for early model Sportsman cars, a preliminary to the $105,000 Winston Western 500 for NASCAR Grand National cars on Jan. 21, is scheduled for 200 miles over Riverside's 2.62-mile, 8-turn road course and begins next Saturday at 1 p.m.

The top 20 starting positions will be determined in today's 1 p.m. qualifying session. Another 18 will qualify Sunday morning and the final six starting spots go to the top finishers of a 2 p.m. consolation race.

Qualification runs for the Winston Western 500 will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

Dolphins find peace and quiet

Miami benefited from Dallas disaster

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

SUPER SUNDAY, minus one.

"I think the Dolphins have an advantage," says George Allen, coach of the Washington Redskins, "being in the Super Bowl last year."

Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula agrees.

"We've had good practices, good concentration," he says, "and I'm satisfied. The players have cooperated with the press but they've had a lot of peace and quiet."

"This year they knew more what to expect during the week. They came in glossy-eyed last year. We'd like to think we came away with something from that disaster (24-3 loss to Dallas)."

The Redskins are a team of veterans, but only two — defensive end Vernon Biggs with the Jets in 1969 and wide receiver Roy Jefferson with the Colts in '71 — have been through the Super Bowl experience.

"If you have the right type of players you can overcome it," Allen says.

But until this year, an Allen team never had won a playoff game. The Dolphins, on the other hand, are younger but better tested under pressure.

"We're still a young club," says Shula, "but we feel we've gained a lot of experience in pressure-type games over the last three years."

"There was the overtime game at Kansas City last season and the AFC championship games the last two years. We feel we have a team that's been exposed to the pressures."

"We learned something more about pressure when we came from behind to beat Cleveland and we certainly won in a tough situation at Pittsburgh. There weren't many people there rooting for the Dolphins."

"That's the way a team grows — facing these situations and learning from them."

MIAMI guard Larry Little, all-pro and the AFC's top offensive lineman the last two years, is proud of the Dolphins' growing stature in the eyes of pro football observers.

"Last year they were saying, 'Who are the Dolphins?'" Little says. "Now everybody knows who we are. Did you see that crowd at the (Long Beach) airport last Sunday? All we have to do is show up."

The Dolphins are the only team ever to produce two 1,000-yard rushers — Larry Csonka and Mercury Morris. Little concedes that much of his reputation comes from blocking for that duo, and the "third" first stringer, Jim Kiick.

"But I'm not basically a pulling guard," he says. "I block inside most of the time. Besides, I don't want to be known as a pulling guard. I want to be known as a complete guard — pulling, blocking straight ahead and pass blocking."

How good is Miami's line?

"I think we're the best offensive line in football. Are you the best guard?" "I let the people say that."

Do you mind if they say it?

"No, I don't." Little has received another honor — an honorary doctorate for his work with underprivileged children.

FOLLOWING Friday's press conference, Allen was presented a White House citation for his "contributions to the national effort against drug abuse."

Asked why Shula hadn't received one, too, George replied: "Cause Shula's a pusher!"

ALLEN said he is not impressed with the Dolphins — on film.

Super notes and quotes

With the Super kickoff less than 48 hours away, discontent has raised its head in the Miami Dolphins camp. Wide receiver Otto Stove and quarterback Jim Del Greco, both reserves, have asked coach Don Shula to trade them.

"I didn't say play me or trade me," Stove said. "I just said 'trade me.'"

"I'll go anywhere," Del Greco said after talking with his coach. "Well, I don't know about Buffalo."

COMMISSIONER Pete Rozelle was not exactly sympathetic to George Allen's complaint of too many distractions. "He's just a very honest, dedicated coach who, as one reporter wrote, would like to practice on an aircraft carrier. It's criticism doesn't bother me at all. Coaches like to have things their own way."

As for what he'd do if players went on strike in 1974, Rozelle quipped, "I'd punt."

MIFFED over President Nixon's support of the Redskins, Florida Gov. Reubin Askew has proclaimed Sunday as "Miami Dolphins Day" in the state. He accused the president of harassing the Dolphins through his support of the Redskins. Askew also took note of the fact that Mr. Nixon backed Miami last year and even sent in a play to Shula, who suffered through a 24-3 loss to Dallas. The President, who will watch the game on TV from Key Biscayne, also recalled the incident and remarked, "I promised George Allen I wouldn't give him any advice."

A BUS carrying the Redskins to practice was a car-renting down the freeway when it passed a sign that read "Casa Corvina Convalescent Home."

"Hey," yelled one of the members of the Over-the-Hill Gang, "that's where we oughta be staying."

last club to trade draft choice that weren't owned, Rozelle smiled and said, "The Washington Redskins."

What was the first club? "The Washington Redskins."

Rozelle touched on several other areas.

—Expansion: "We have no plans for immediate expansion, but it will be discussed in our April meeting in Phoenix. Perhaps we will then begin investigating the various expansion sites."

Portland and Honolulu were mentioned as possible expansion sites.

—Sudden death and two-point conversion: "Yes, it's possible a change will be made, but it's not likely both will be adopted."

—Instant replay camera: "I wish we could use the instant replay. But we'd have to have 12 cameras in use because of all the angles involved. The biggest objection would be the interruption to the pace of the game."

—Playing out options: "The only time I intervene is when the clubs cannot agree on what constitutes just compensation when a player doesn't sign his contract, plays out his option and then goes to another club. The only times I've intervened have been in the cases of Ron Kramer, Pat Fischer, Dave Parks and, in slightly different cases, Phil Olsen and Dick Gordon."

Rozelle also revealed that since 1959, 84 players played out their option and, of those, 29 signed with another club, 44 re-signed with their original team and 11 either retired or went to Canada to play. In 1971, 31 players didn't sign their contracts, the biggest year yet for playing out options. Of those, eight went to new teams, 18 wound up with their original club, and five retired or went to Canada.

ROBERTS COLUMN

job," casting a wary eye toward Jim Heffernan, the National Conference publicity director. "I've been fined a couple of times (the latest had not been revealed at the time) so I've got to watch what I say. But there's so many distractions, it's difficult for these guys to concentrate on the job at hand."

The players were available for formal interviews on only three days, a 45-minute session each day. Following the coach's session, certain ones were called in by request. The trouble was, Allen says, is that somebody always requested Bill Kilmer, Larry Brown, Jack Pardee, etc.

"The only thing I think we ought to do," Allen says, "is have a special day where you interview the (Russell) Tillmans, the Mike Halls and those fellows so we don't wear out the Larry Browns."

THE WRITERS' VIEW, of course is that the world is not waiting with baited breath for Russell Tillman's view of the Super Bowl.

If Allen had his way — which he doesn't at the Super Bowl — he would quarantine himself with his players at Searchlight, Nev., and let the press make up his quotes, which he is convinced it does anyway.

"In 1966 with the Rams, we felt it could be better to get 'em out where it's a five-dollar ride into town. Like a business trip," George says. "Some of the players had been downtown window shopping. We thought we'd get 'em out where it's a five-dollar ride into town."

Actually, Allen and Shula do see eye-to-eye in this regard. The major difference is in the fact with which their views are presented.

For example, both seclude their players from domestic distractions by bringing the players into town on Sunday and the wives on Friday. They will not meet until after the game.

NOBODY CAN SPEAK for Allen's wife Elly, but it's been a tough week for George. At one point in Friday's session he asked plaintively, "Gentlemen... Jim, how much more do you want?"

He then went on to relate how an injured Dolphin player, cornerback Tim Foley, had been at Thursday's press session at Anaheim apparently taping interviews for a Miami station.

"I saw this fella with a cast on his arm talking to our players," George said. "He interviewed me and afterward I found out who he was, they ought to have a league rule against that."

He smiled a little when he said it, but not much. Probably wishes he had thought of it first.

But there we go, picking on George Allen again.

"The thing that bothers me," he said, "is that Miami executes so well that they're not that impressive on film. They're like a baseball team that has six hitters around .305 — no big guns, just everybody doing a job."

The Redskins' coach stood by his earlier prediction that "24 points will definitely be a winner... and I don't believe the score will be that high."

MERCURY Morris' big year stole some thunder from Csonka's sidekick, Jim Kiick, but Csonka insists there was never any jealousy involved.

"In a situation like that you'd expect petty jealousies," he says, "but it's been real good. They're both intelligent people. When one's in, the other's pulling for him."

In fact, late in the season when Morris was closing in on 1,000 yards but the Dolphins were winning handily, Kiick was urging Morris to go back into the game.

Csonka also is glad to have Bob Griese back at quarterback — no knock on Earl Morrall.

"The corner back of Bob Griese has been a potent mental lift for the team," Csonka says. "We know how he thinks. We can function more as a team and less as followers."

AFTER their NFC title win over Dallas, the Redskins knelt to pray before a national TV audience.

They were led by Tom Skinner, the "team chaplain" and head of an evangelistic association in New York City.

But the Redskins aren't unique. All pro teams have some sort of religious services before and after games. Several clergymen travel alternately with the Dolphins.

"We've always had a pre-game prayer and a post-game prayer," says Shula, but there is a difference.

"I lead it," Shula says.
